"THE RATS are unbelievable," said City Building Inspector Glenn Tatman in reference to the former Fayette Elevator building on E. Court Street City Councilman Donald E. Wood said he recently chased away three children who were throwing stones into four feet of water which is standing in the basement, lower photo. Wood asked for official city action to require the owner, Walter Driesbach, to either tear down the building or board it up. Tatman, referring to the holes in the floor (shown in the top photo just inside the open door), said a person could easily fall into the water below.

Arnold pleads guilty to embezzlement

J. M. (Mike) Arnold, 112 E. Temple St., entered guilty pleas today in U. S. District Court, Columbus, to two charges of embezzlement, according to the U. S. attorney's office in Columbus.

He was indicted Feb. 28 by a federal grand jury on counts of embezzling $10,500 from the Washington Savings Bank.

Judge Joseph Kinneary ordered a presentence investigation. Sentencing is tentatively scheduled for May 18, and Arnold was released on his own recognizance.

A former city councilman, Arnold was indicted for embezzling $10,000 from the bank in May, 1970, and $500 in May, 1971. He was employed by the bank as a teller at the time of the two incidents. His employment there was terminated about 1½ years ago.

The maximum penalty on a federal embezzling charge of $5,000 fine or 5 years in prison or both.

10 motorized mail routes start Monday

Effective Monday, 10 of the 11 Washington C. H. city mail delivery routes will be motorized, Richard Witherspoon, postmaster, announced Friday.

"In order to do this, we must revamp all of our city routes," Witherspoon said. "Most of our customers will receive their mail at approximately the same time, although some will receive it earlier, and in a few cases the mail will arrive later."

"In the residential areas, the same carrier who delivers your letter mail will also bring any parcel post matter that you may receive," the postmaster added.

Witherspoon said the step is being taken to provide better service, at the same time resulting in a dollar saving to the Postal Service.

The only route which will not be motorized is No. 5 which primarily serves the downtown area.

The cars to be used by postmen are being leased from a Cincinnati firm.

New dimension in Watergate

Magruder quits post

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sudden, unexplained resignation of former Nixon campaign deputy Jeb S. Magruder from the Commerce Department adds a new dimension to the Watergate scandal.

It was the first resignation of any high administration official involved in the widening wiretap affair.

In another development, The Washington Post, The New York Times and New York Daily News quoted sources as saying that Acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III destroyed documents belonging to convicted Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt Jr. after being told by presidential aides John Ehrlichman and John W. Dean III that the documents should "never see the light of day."

Ehrlichman issued a statement through the White House press office confirming that at a June 1972 meeting in his White House office Dean gave Gray a sealed envelope containing "some of the contents of Hunt's safe."

"Mr. Gray was told by Mr. Dean that the contents were sensitive materials not in any way related to the Watergate case," said the statement. "I was present but neither then nor at any other time did I give Mr. Gray any request, suggestion or instruction regarding what should be done with the contents."

Dean and Gray could not be reached for comment.

Magruder reportedly had been both an accuser and an accused in the case. He left his $36,000-a-year job as Commerce Department director of policy development without formal notice. His lawyer, James J. Bierbower, was asked late Thursday night for an explanation, and said flatly, "There will be none."

Recent news reports have quoted Magruder as telling federal prosecutors that Mitchell and Dean, the White House counsel, approved and helped plan last summer's wiretapping of Democratic offices. Magruder also reportedly said the pair later arranged payoffs to silence the defendants in the case.

Dean has said publicly he won't be a scapegoat and has vowed privately to implicate others. News reports say Magruder broke down only after Dean made accusations of his own to prosecutors.

In other Watergate developments:

—The Washington Post, quoting reliable sources, said that Dean told President Nixon on March 20 that "to save the presidency" Dean and Nixon's two top aides—H.R. Haldeman and Ehrlichman—would have to disclose all they knew about Watergate and face the possible consequence of going to jail. The Post said Dean told federal prosecutors all he knew on April 6 but Haldeman and Ehrlichman apparently balked.

JEB S. MAGRUDER

Various news reports have said Nixon has asked, or is about to ask, Secretary of State William P. Rogers, former Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird, NATO Ambassador Donald Rumsfeld or former White House lobbyist Bryce Harlow. Harlow says he hasn't been asked. Laird says he isn't available. Sources close to Rogers say he hasn't been asked, either. Rumsfeld couldn't be reached.

—A lawyer representing two presidential aides in the Watergate scandal shuttled Thursday from the White House to the office of federal prosecutor Silbert.

The lawyer, John J. Wilson, has met twice with Nixon himself. Thursday he had first talked to his clients, Haldeman and Ehrlichman, and then visited Silbert's office for roughly half an hour.

He said they discussed the Watergate affair, and that Haldeman and Ehrlichman would appear voluntarily before the grand jury if asked.

—Others who appeared in Silbert's office during the day were Powell Moore, a former spokesman for the Nixon campaign, and Hugh Sloan, the former treasurer.

Nixon tours flood area

By BILL O'SHEA
Associated Press Writer

President Nixon makes an aerial inspection today of flooded areas in the Mississippi River valley where about 10,000 persons have been left homeless and damage estimates have climbed to more than $200 million.

Ten persons have lost their lives in the flooding along the Mississippi, Missouri and Illinois rivers and their tributaries in seven states.

In some areas the highest flood-levels in recorded history were expected to worsen after new rains last week fell on top of earlier heavy spring downpours. The Mississippi River at St. Louis reached 42.16 feet overnight and was rising. The previous record of 42 feet was set in 1785.

In Washington, Nixon declared flood-stricken parts of Illinois major disaster areas and moved to make federal aid available.

The help will consist primarily of temporary housing, unemployment assistance, low-interest loans, debirs clearance and repairs to roads, bridges, dikes and levees.

Nixon was to fly over some of the flooded areas en route to a ceremony at Meridian, Miss., honoring Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss.

The crest, or highest flood level, of the Mississippi swept past Hannibal, Mo., during the night, but the saturated levees upriver at Quincy, Ill., remained in serious jeopardy, a spokesman for the U.S. Corps of Army Engineers said.

The Corps of Army Engineers at St. Louis estimated that if the river reaches its expected crest of 43.5 feet there on Saturday $136 million in damages will have been done in Missouri and Illinois alone.

"A few more inches can mean a hell of a lot when you're talking about the Mississippi," a spokesman said.

To the south, the National Weather Service reported no rain expected in Louisiana or Mississippi through Sunday but said there is a chance of showers on Monday or Tuesday.

The Arkansas River continued to fall on Thursday and the forecast called for fair weather after 12 consecutive days of rain and flooding.

The long-term effects of the flooding depend to a large extent on future rainfall. The Southern cotton crop will be dealt a severe blow if the rain does not stop before the mid-May planting season. Cotton prices are already rising.

Rain fell over much of the eastern third of the nation today, and a wintry chill maintained crisp temperatures in the midcontinent.

A flash-flood watch was posted for Georgia and the mountains of the Carolinas. Savannah, Ga., was soaked by more than two inches of rain through Thursday night.

Showers ranged westward into Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee and north across New England.

Cool, dry air sweeping over the Plains dropped temperatures into the 20s in sections of the Dakotas and the 30s as far south as the Texas Panhandle.

Fog covered the California coast, and a few showers dampened Oregon.

Clear skies prevailed from the California coastal ranges across the central and southern Plateau to the central and southern Rockies.

Weather

Rain today and tonight with a chance of showers continuing tomorrow. Lows tonight near 40. Highs tomorrow again near 50.

Man files suit to close down vo-ed schools

UPPER SANDUSKY, Ohio (AP)—Contending the goal of education is "how to live, not how to make a living," E. Dennis Barnes of Upper Sandusky has filed a suit seeking to close down vocational training units in Ohio schools.

Barnes, a member of the city's board of education, claims in his common pleas court action that the units are unconstitutional because the Ohio Constitution authorizes only "common schools."

Barnes said that term is limited to mental training and excludes manual or job training courses.

Named defendants in the suit were state school Superintendent Martin Essex and the four members of the Upper Sandusky Board of Education.

Viet Reds dampen report of talks by Kissinger, Tho

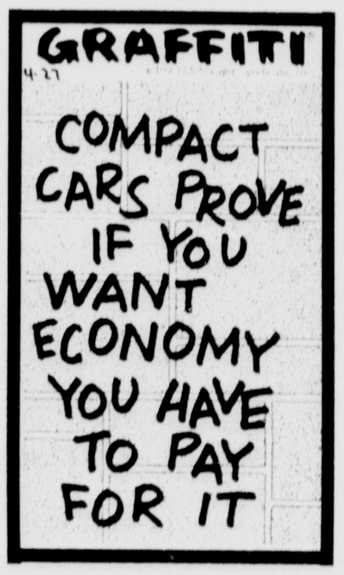

PARIS (AP) — The North Vietnamese Embassy threw cold water today on U.S. talk of a meeting between Henry A. Kissinger and Le Duc Tho, saying it knew nothing about such a meeting to discuss enforcement of the Vietnamese ceasefire.

The embassy issued a statement saying news about such a meeting had been issued unilaterally by the United States.

The North Vietnamese statement was issued as William Sullivan, U.S. deputy assistant secretary of state, and Nguyen Co Thach, Hanoi's deputy foreign minister, began talks on ways to carry out the cease-fire agreement signed in Paris three months ago today.

Those negotiations had been announced simultaneously Wednesday by the United States and North Vietnam. The announcements said nothing about a meeting between President Nixon's national security adviser and the North Vietnamese Politburo member with whom he negotiated the ceasefire agreement, but sources at the White House then said the talks between Sullivan and Thach would be a preliminary to a Kissinger-Tho meeting in mid-May.

The North Vietnamese communique today said: "According to Western news agency dispatches, the White House has announced that there would be a meeting between special counsellor Le Duc Tho and Dr. Kissinger around mid-May 1973. This is a report made unilaterally by the United States. The Embassy of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam does not yet have any information on the subject of this meeting."

Approval of a $30,000 Head Start grant for the Fayette County Community Action Commission in Washington C. H. was announced Friday noon by Congressman William H. Harsha's office in Washington, D.C.

The grant, made by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, is for the operation of a summer Head Start program for 120 children.

CANCER CRUSADE PREVIEW — Mrs. Paul D. Lucas (left), a volunteer worker, hands cancer information literature to Mrs. Ernest D. Wilson and in return received a contribution to the fund to fight cancer in this preview of the annual Cancer Crusade here. This scene will be re-enacted many times Sunday when more than 500 volunteers start going from house to house to leave cancer information pamphlets and receive contributions.

500 volunteers to conduct appeal

Cancer Crusade opens Sunday

More than 500 volunteers will launch the annual house-to-house Cancer Crusade here Sunday to raise funds for fighting one of the world's worst killer diseases.

The theme of the Crusade this year is: "We Want To Wipe Out Cancer in Your Lifetime." Behind that there is a lot of hard work on national, state and local levels.

Jim Vess is the Crusade chairman and Paul V. Johnson the co-chairman. Mrs. Mary Alice Graumlich is the executive director of the Fayette County unit of the American Cancer Society. They will direct the Crusade in which volunteers will attempt to contact all of the approximately 8,000 homes in Washington C. H. and the rural area of the county.

CHAIRMAN VESS said: "We'll try to make the 1973 theme come true in two ways. First, we'll ask our friends and neighbors to have annual health checkups, including all - important cancer tests, and then the volunteers will ask the people to fight cancer with whatever they can afford so that the Cancer Society's programs of research, education and service to cancer patients can continue and be expanded.

Unit President Robert E. Minshall said he is well pleased with the plans for this year's Crusade and expressed appreciation of the many hours already given to it by so many volunteers.

Minshall said: "Because of the efforts of these people and the generous contributions by the citizens here, definite progress is being made in the fight against cancer . . . because of this, the whole world is a little closer to the cures for cancers of all types."

MRS. MARION WADDLE, public education chairman of the county unit, explained that the reason so much emphasis is placed on annual checkups is very clear. She pointed out that "today, if not even one new thing is learned from the research laboratories, the physicians have the knowledge that could save 108,000 more cancer patients every year." She added, however, that "early diagnosis and prompt treatment are the only ways to achieve that goal."

Mrs. Byers W. Shaw, chairman of the county unit's service committee, said thousands of American women will die this year because they refuse, or neglect, or forget, or put off having a simple painless Pap test for uterine cancer. "So many forms of cancer are curable now," she said, adding, "That's the hopeful side of the Cancer Crusade . . . that and the marvelous quality of our research scientists."

Eugene Bienz is chairman of the residential Crusade in the city, and Mrs. Virgil Hardman and Mrs. Edwin Thompson are co-chairman of the rural residential Crusade.

Egypt sets war measure for Cairo

CAIRO (AP) — Street lights in this city of six million persons will be dimmed by 25 per cent beginning tonight as part of Egypt's stepped-up preparations for "total confrontation" with Israel.

There was speculation Egypt may time a military attack to coincide with Israel's 25th anniversary celebrations, but according to reports from Tel Aviv, President Anwar Sadat has been warned by Western diplomats in Cairo to be cautious or he will run the risk of an Israeli invasion across the Suez Canal.

Government technical groups also will begin visiting some 4,000 buildings erected since 1968 to insure they have air raid shelters, newspapers reported.

The government has resorted to dimouts in the past to heighten the public's defense consciousness.

Many Cairo windows and headlights remain painted blue from blackouts first ordered in 1969 when Israeli jets ranged unchecked over Egypt.

Actress Irene Ryan dies; 'Granny' on television show

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — To millions of viewers who watched "The Beverly Hillbillies" during its nine-year run on television, diminutive Irene Ryan was the "Granny" who kept her backwoods kin in line with her sometimes-shrill voice.

She once said, "That's how most people recognize me, through my voice. I'd lot rather be known as 'The Body,' but I guess I'll have to be content with what I got."

The veteran actress, who recently made her Broadway debut in "Pippin," died Thursday night at a Santa Monica hospital after suffering a stroke. She was 70.

She was flown here after being stricken on the "Pippin" stage March 10.

Miss Ryan had become a millionaire through savings and investments from "The Beverly Hillbillies," a comedy about a family that struck it rich on oil.

She had endowed a foundation bearing her name with more than $1 million in scholarships for promising students in theater arts. She was scheduled to be present Sunday at this year's presentations at the John F. Kennedy Center for Performing Arts in Washington.

Her career began at age 11 when she sang "Pretty Baby" as loudly as she could in winning $3 in an amateur contest at San Francisco's old Valencia Theater.

With her late first husband, Tim Ryan, the comedy team of "Tim and Irene" toured vaudeville for years, then made it to radio.

Starting in 1962, on "The Beverly Hillbillies" she became known as the forceful "Granny" who liked to puff a pipe, tote a rifle and try to put good sense into Beverly Hills when the television family moved from hillbilly country after striking oil.

Her role in "Pippin" had earned her a Tony nomination and her song from the show, "No Time At All," was a recording hit.

Funeral services are to be held here next Tuesday.

Capacity crowd enjoys Boys' Choir concert

A capacity audience applauded the "Springtime in Song" concert by the Fayette County Boys Choir Wednesday night in the Sunnyside School auditorium. Approximately 200 tickets had been sold in advance and that is just about the seating capacity of the auditorium.

The program was opened by the 20-voice choir, which was joined by the audience, singing "America."

The choir, under the direction of Mrs. Robert E. Willis, the founder, sang such numbers as "Bless this House," "Beautiful Ohio," "Home on the Range," , the "Marine Hymn," and the spiritual, "Lonesome Valley."

The program also included solos by Jeff Fannon, "Every Fellow Needs a Girl" and "The Lord's Prayer," and Greg Sanderson, "The Palms"; a reading, "I Am an American," by Don Eyre, and a quartet composed of Jeff Fannin, Jeff Overly, Greg Sanderson and Tim Dunlap. The chorus sang "Where in the World but in America" for the finale.

Five alumni of the choir at the concert were introduced. Two of them, Gary Brown and Colin Leeth, were ushers.

Proceeds from the concert will be added to the fund for the choir's trip to Charlottsville, Va. The group will leave by chartered bus May 4.

John Huffman was the choir accompanist, Scott Lanum was in charge of the stage and lighting effects, and Garrell Leasure is the trip manager.

Russia shifts top members of Politburo

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Communist party fired two members of its ruling Politburo today and promoted three men, including Defense Minister Andrei A. Grechko and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, to the Kremlin's highest body, Tass reported.

The Politburo is the party's most powerful policy-making body. Politburo members Pyotr Shelest and Gennady I. Voronov were removed from the Politburo at the final day of a two-day meeting here of the Communist party's Central Committee.

The third new member of the Politburo is Yuri V. Andropov, the chief of the Soviet secret police, known by its Russian initials as the KGB.

The personnel changes increased the Politburo to 16 men.

Marshal Grechko, defense minister since 1967, is the first military man to sit on the Politburo since Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov served a brief six months in 1957.

Both Gromyko and Grechko are considered strong supporters of General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Andropov's new post evidently elevates the KGB organization back into the inner sanctum of the Kremlin. The KGB chief's political allegiances are unclear, but he is not known as a Brezhnev critic.

Judge orders remap suit dismissal

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Reacting to a federal judge's order, Republicans today were to ask dismissal of their Ohio Supreme Court suit challenging the 1971 apportionment of state legislative districts.

Atty. John McElroy said federal Judge Frank J. Battisti had ordered the suit filed in the Ohio Supreme Court dismissed by court closing time today.

McElroy filed the lawsuit March 30, in the name of Lloyd George Kerns of Richwood, a former state representative.

It asked that the Democratic-drafted reapportionment plan be declared null and void and that the court order new elections this year for the 99 House and 33 Senate district.

McElroy said he was getting out of the litigation "because it is too wearing upon me." But he said he would first set up the legal groundwork for an appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court and the Sixth District Court of Appeals in Cincinnati.

McElroy served as an aide to former Republican Gov. James A. Rhodes.

Defendants in the court action were the five members of the State Apportionment Board which drew the legislative district boundaries now in effect.

They are Gov. John J. Gilligan, Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, Sen. Anthony O. Celabrese, D-22 Cleveland, all Democrats, and Secretary of State Ted W. Brown and former Rep. Robert A. Manning of Akron, both Republicans.

In the Kerns' petition, McElroy said the five-member board followed the one-man, one vote edict of the U. S. Supreme Court when it adopted the plan Dec. 20, 1971, but violated the Ohio Constitution by not following political boundaries.

'Extra' life for youth proves costly

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — At 21, Bob Vetter has outlived his life expectancy and can barely afford to pay for the treatments that are keeping him alive.

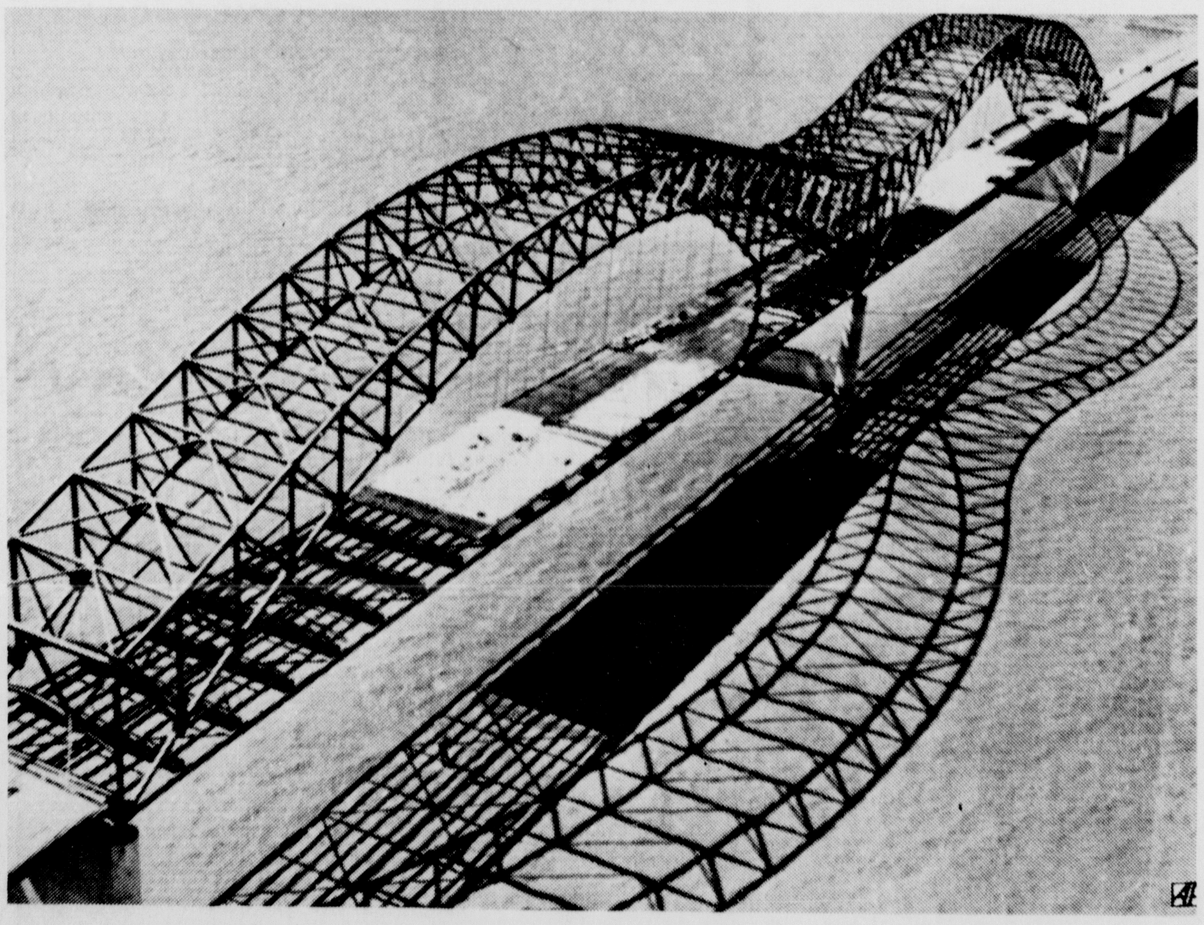

Suffering from cystic fibrosis, Vetter is too old to qualify for help from the Florida Bureau of Crippled Children. And when he can work, he makes too much money to qualify for welfare.

"I'm 21, what am I supposed to do, sit back and die?" he asks.

When Vetter is feeling well, he can work to pay the $225 a month for pills he needs to keep his digestive system and lungs functioning. But when he is so sick that he has to be admitted to All Children's Hospital here, there is no way he can pay his bills.

A hereditary, non-contagious disease, cystic fibrosis affects the respiratory system and pancreas, preventing the body from digesting food properly or fighting infection.

Most cystic fibrosis patients die by the time they reach adolescence and few live long enough to finish high school. Vetter is one of only a handful at the hospital who have lived beyond their teens, a hospital spokesman says.

BRIDGE OF SHADOWS — Work is under way on the decking of a new $50 million Mississippi River bridge at Memphis, Tenn. The bridge is scheduled to be opened to traffic late this year. Meanwhile, a bright spring sun cooperated to cast the bridge's shadow on the river, showing off the giant "M" of the super-structure.

The rain and cloudiness in Ohio Friday was part of a storm system that moved out of Mississippi and into the Carolinas during the night.

At dawn Friday, rain fell over all but the extreme northwestern counties. Measurable rain was confined to the Chesapeake and Marietta areas along the Ohio River. Both areas reported less than a half inch.

Rain from the storm will persist over the eastern counties Friday night, while the western section will have scatteree showers. On Saturday rain is expected to continue only in the eastern counties.

Colder air will push into Ohio as the storm moves up the East Coast. Lows Friday night will be from the mid 30s to the 40s. Higts on Saturday will be from 45 to 55.

Meanwhile, the northeast and north winds continue along the Lake Erie shoreline, causing more erosion and localized flooding.

The northeast winds were reported from 15 to 25 knots east of Lorain, raising the water levels in the western end of the lake. West of Lorain, winds were also ranging from 15 to 25 knots.

The winds were expected to increase Friday and shift more to the northwest Friday night.

A chance of showers, mainly Monday and Tuesday. Highs from the upper 40s to upper 50s Sunday and from the mid 50s to mid 60s Tuesday. Lows in the 40s.

Stock list plummets

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock market prices plummeted today and analysts attributed the slump to investor concern over inflation and rising interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials had fallen 8.58 points to 929.18 at 11:30 a.m. Declines held a 3-2 edge over advances in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The market had advanced Thursday and the Dow rose more than 7 points after Washington announced President Nixon would meet with his top economic advisers over the weekend. Brokers said the rally evaporated after government figures indicated the meeting was not expected to produce any concrete results.

Saxbe blasts pollution law

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — U.S. Sen. William Saxbe, R-Ohio, today urged relaxation of anti-pollution laws to avoid a worsening of the energy crisis.

"Unless we move quickly to develop new energy reserves and lift some of these ridiculous pollution restrictions, the gasoline shortage will be just the tip of the iceberg," Saxbe told the Franklin County Forum, in prepared remarks.

"We're also going to have factory shut-downs and serious electrical brownouts which will effect a lot of jobs," he added.

Johnson to quit as JA director

Burdette Johnson, who has been director of the Junior Achievement Center here for the last two years, told the board of directors at a luncheon meeting Thursday in the Terrace Lounge that he will step out at the end of this school year when the four JA companies are dissolved.

Officers and directors for the 1973-74 year will be elected at the May 24 meeting. The new board then will seek another Center director. The director's job is only parttime and carries a nominal salary.

Much of the discussion at the meeting, which was conducted by President Chester Maple, an Armco industrial engineer, revolved about ways to interest more students in the program which is open to both boys and girls in Washington C.H. and Miami Trace high schools.

Approximately 80 students have been learning the fundamentals of business, from manufacturing to sales, in the four Junior Achievement companies here this year.

Watergate shadow darkens job vacancies

By GAYLORD SHAW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Watergate scandal, its impact rippling through vast reaches of the government, is cited by officials sources as one reason for the White House's inability to fill nearly 50 top-level federal jobs.

Sources contacted in an Associated Press survey also reported instances of paperwork piling up and employe morale sagging because of Watergate, because of President Nixon's second-term reorganization plan, or the lame-duck aspect of his administration.

White House spokesmen reject suggestions that Watergate is to blame for the lag in rounding out Nixon's second-term team or that it has slowed the bureaucratic processes.

"The processes of government are going on ... the work of government is being done," said White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler.

But other sources report a near-paralysis has set in at some policy-making levels in the 10 days since Nixon announced he had launched a personal investigation of the Watergate case after major but still undisclosed developments came to his attention.

The AP survey stretching into widespread sections of the federal establishment also found:

—A White House breakdown shows 26 sub-Cabinet posts remain unfilled three months after Nixon began his second term and launched his reorganization plan. In the upper levels of some departments, the vacancy rate exceeds 25 per cent.

—Ambassadors are yet to be named for 23 countries, a vacancy rate of 18 per cent in these top diplomatic posts. 7

—Latest statistics indicate more than 400 vacancies in lower-and middle-level "Schedule C" government jobs, meaning that about 30 per cent of these jobs, filled by political appointment, are empty.

—Reports mandated by the President or Congress are long overdue in some cases. At the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, one source familiar with the lagging bureaucratic pace said "people are waiting for new bosses to get new directions."

—Low morale is cited virtually everywhere in government. "You'd be surprised how Watergate has affected morale," said an Agriculture Department source. "The trauma has really set in," added a Social Security Administration source.

—At the White House, some staffers have noted a sudden slowing in their usually hectic work pace. One Executive Office Building secretary said that for the first time in years she's been able to go home before dark because "nothing is coming in from the departments."

The President's own work pace has increased, however.

He's been spending "a great deal of time" on the Watergate matter, Ziegler said, "getting in very early and staying late at night."

When asked Thursday about the large number of sub-Cabinet and ambassadorial vacancies, Ziegler responded: "I don't have the answer to why that is the case ...."

Caspar Weinberger, Nixon's new secretary of health, education and welfare, cited another reason in a recent conversation with newsmen. The biggest problem, he said, is that the wives of potential government executives don't want to uproot their families and move to Washington.

But another administration official agreed "there is a certain amount of truth" to suggestions that the Watergate scandal has made some people reluctant to join the administration.

The White House compilation shows that 12.7 per cent of the 205 positions it ranks as "sub-Cabinet" are currently vacant. But at some departments, more than one-fourth of these positions are empty.

Cincy skyscraper plans abandoned

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP)— Plans for a $40-$50 million skyscraper proposed for downtown Cincinnati appear to be abandoned.

The Cincinnati Enquirer reported today there was only an outside chance the building would be built.

George C. Eyrich, attorney for Wiggin's Restaurant, said Unit, Inc., which was planning the structure, had failed to renew its option on property adjoining Wiggins.

The 50-story, quarter-block project was to be built at the site of the Albee Theater.

Opinion And Comment

Poor foreign policy reports

The law requires that the executive branch provide Congress with a wide range of information on foreign policy and its implementation. The congressional committees most directly concerned with this have just released a report, made after a two-year study, showing that much of the information received is both inadequate and slow in coming.

These strictures apply in particular to United States military aid to other countries. Often, it seems, data on military aid is so vague and distorted as to be incomprehensible or even deceptive.

This is a matter of great importance to the national welfare. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee, which jointly ordered the study, cannot formulate sound judgments without good information. If the information provided them is too little and too late, failing accurately to describe the true state of affairs, the legislative process with regard to foreign policy may be seriously hampered.

The report's adverse conclusions are supported by case histories. We are told, for example, that a quarterly report on U.S. spending in Laos omitted the cost of air combat operations and the transfer of excess equipment. We learn that a similar report as to Cambodia said merely that the purpose of 53 million dollars' worth of military equipment, supplies and training was to "upgrade the capabilities of the armed forces of the Khmer Republic." That was, to put it as mildly as possible, not of much help to members of Congress seeking to discover the extent of our government's involvement in Cambodia.

At another point it is observed that weapons turned over to allies by withdrawing U.S. forces were not included in reports on compliance with the congressionally imposed 2.5-billion-dollar ceiling on military aid to Indochina. As to this the report rather moderately notes that it "makes it difficult to determine if U.S. assistance to its allies is being used by them to support the governments of Cambodia and Laos."

Numerous other examples of shortcomings are cited. All in all, one gets a picture of inadequate and misleading reports on foreign policy implementation. A decided improvement in the reporting process should be demanded by Congress.

THESE DAYS . . . by John Chamberlain

Who's entitled to become an M.D.?

As a columnist who draws his share of the mail, I have noticed that two particular topics provoke a particularly heavy correspondence. One is education; the other is medicine. Or perhaps it is only one topic, for it is medical education that sends people to their typewriters and inkwells.

Not too long ago I wrote a column about the difficulty of getting into American medical schools. Albert Schrager, who runs the Alliance for Franco-American Graduate Studies, Inc., at 527 Madison Ave. in New York City, had been complaining that, out of 37,000 applicants, only 13,570 managed to gain acceptance to U.S. medical schools in 1972. In despair, a few hundred Americans with a driving desire to become physicians seek to go abroad each year for medical training.

Mr. Schrager is troubled by the fact that students have had a bad dropout record in foreign universities, owing mainly to language troubles and general cultural shock. One mission of his organization is to see to it that students entering medical schools in France and Italy can meet the language requirements before embarking on their educations.

Mr. Schrager, in conversation, was bitter over the inability of Americans to obtain information about switching to U.S. schools after two years of academic work abroad. He blamed the U.S. medical organizations, including the American Medical Association, for cultivating attitudes that limit entry to a profession which, in the light of the fees charged, can hardly be said to be overcrowded.

THE COLUMN about Mr. Schrager touched some very sensitive nerves. I am still forwarding letters to him from students who have, as they insist, "all the standard requirements for medical school except for grade-point average." Beyond this there are the letters from doctors.

Some are angry with me for saying there is a shortage of doctors in the U.S. Others can't see how a "libertarian," which I most certainly am, can ask physicians to get behind a movement to enlist government in a crusade to start more medical schools. (My answer to this is that free-market theory doesn't apply to a field in which state licensing denies the principle of free entry.)

Other correspondents, including Marvin Edwards, the editor of Private Practice: Journal of the Congress of County Medical Societies, admit that it is tragic that there are not enough facilities to train more prospective doctors (Mr. Edwards says "it is ridiculous to have to turn away B students, even some A students, at times"). But these correspondents absolve the American Medical Association.

Dr. Lee Sataline, who teaches clinical medicine at the University of Connecticut, says "the Association of American Medical Colleges is perhaps more at fault in this scandalous mess than the AMA." Mr. Edwards, who denies that it is "part of the AMA's function to build medical schools," says the organization "has been very generous in providing student scholarships and in encouraging the profession . . . to contribute to the medical schools."

And the AMA's Robert Root makes the "little known point" that, immediately after World War II, "the AMA suggested continuation of the wartime acceleration program of training doctors." If this had happened, we would have had 55,000 more doctors now. Mr. Root adds that the "basic problem" today "is one of distribution and over-specialization and not necessarily production of sheer numbers."

I GATHER from the spate of mail that I may have wronged the American Medical Association, but that a problem nonetheless does exist. If there is "over-specialization," it means we need more general practitioners, particularly in ghetto and rural areas.

As for those medical students who go abroad for their education and then fail to pass the necessary qualifying examination after returning home, Dr. Sataline has some poignant words. Talking with students at Bologna University in Italy, Dr. Sataline noted their "resentment and frustration" with authorities in the U.S. who, so they felt, had "overlooked their ability or motivation" and had "forsaken them as second-class citizens and students."

Since the Bologna courses "are basically didactic and heavily laden with theory," there is a "lack of correlation of the material stressed in Italian as compared to the American texts."

It follows that there are failures in the examinations on which U.S. licensing depends. The foreign-trained student often does better the second time around after he has reviewed material in American books.

A WORD EDGEWISE . . . by John P. Roche

As the King wills it

Many monarchs have discovered in their declining years that when they pushed the buttons, nobody came to learn the royal will. Or if they did come, it was no longer on the dead run, but casually.

Meanwhile, somewhere else in the palace the retainers were ingratiating themselves with the crown prince. As one Roman commentator, Victorus Or, put it, " a setting sun throws little heat." Monarchic responses varied: some crown princes were executed for not exercising necessary patience, others were exiled.

But the monarchic principle left little room for maneuver: there was an automatic heir. If a king had three sons, he couldn't play them off against each other and thus retain decisive power — the oldest boy was it.

In an interesting fashion I think we are witnessing President Nixon's game plan for keeping himself out of the monarch's dilemma. Since he cannot constitutionally run again for President, the natural instincts of the federal bureaucracy from Cabinet secretaries down to clerk-typists would lead them to chum up with the heir apparent. On the other hand, nobody wants to get deeply involved with the Pretender to the throne. So in practical terms what you have to figure out is who is really in line for the crown.

THE IMMEDIATE response at this stage would be Vice President Spiro Agnew, who has been a good soldier, has a strong conservative base in the Republican Party, and is a man of considerable talent. (Before you write Agnew off, recall that the President supplied the speech-writers who gave the Vice President his polysyllabic reputation and then see a rerun of a TV "confrontation" he had with a group of radical students in which he calmly and rationally demolished them).

"Yes," the prudent, upwardly mobile bureaucrat would normally say to himself, "I must get close to Agnew."

Then suddenly a cold breeze comes in from the Southwest, Johny Connally by name. Connally, who is certainly one of the ablest men in American politics, comes on like gang-busters. And it seems as though every time the President gets in front of a news camera, he is explaining to the world in general what a great man Connally is.

In the background is the story, which I have every reason to believe is true, that Nixon did offer the Vice Presidential nomination to Connally last year, but after the shooting of George Wallace, Mrs. Connally (who understabnly has never forgotten those fearful minutes in Dallas in November, 1963) persuaded her husband not to accept.

Connally could easily become a Republican and, with Mr. Nixon's support, go for the big one. The political resources of a retiring President have, I think, been grossly underestimated. He certainly couldn't hand it to Connally on a platter, but he can call in a lot of due bills.

Moreover, if Connally chose to take on Agnew, there would be some spectacular primaries and the Texan is a superb campaigner.

FINALLY, just to make life interesting, Mr. Nixon recently gave his old antagonist, Nelson Rockefeller, a friendly pat, encouraging the New York governor in the latter's zany effort to glue together a coalition of Republicans and Liberals to elect Robert Wagner again as mayor of New York City.

This leaves our prudent, upwardly mobile bureaucrat in a bind. If he goes to Agnew and Connally gets the nod, he will have to find a foundation job. On the other hand, premature commitment to Connally is equally dangerous.

And what about Nelson? There is plenty of life in that old pol.

Maybe the best thing to do is stick with the king, at least until he flashes the signal. As an experienced Nixon-watcher, I would not anticipate any signal for another three years: he is not going to suffer the indignity of pushing a button and having no one come.

"THE DECREASE IN VIOLENT CRIME, IS IT IN THE PENITENTIARIES OR IN THE STREETS."

Hal Boyle . . . Railroading in Australia

By GORDON TAIT
(Subbing for Hal Boyle)

MUNDABRILLA, Australia (AP) — Mundabrilla is a collection of cottages occupied by maintenance men for Australia's transcontinental railway. It's 775 miles east of Perth and 1,687 miles west of Sydney—the two cities that a train called the Indian-Pacific links in a trip that takes the best part of three days and three nights.

The train is air-conditioned and has a club car, dining car, single and twin roomettes, showers and easy chairs. Most of the time it's booked months in advance.

The Indian-Pacific is so named because it is a link between those two oceans.

Out from Mundabrilla, going east, the stunted mulga and mallee trees become fewer as the train rolls toward the Nullarbor plain at a steady 60 miles an hour.

Nullarbor is Latin for "not any trees" and the rail track runs for 420 miles across this limestone plain with never a tree in sight—perfectly flat with only saltbush or spinifex grass as far as one can see.

There's no town in this area, only occasional groupings of railroad workers' cottages and places which watered the locomotives before diesel-electrics took over from steam.

The express stops at few of these settlements. They are served by the affectionately named Tea and Sugar, a train that includes clothing and grocery stores, a butcher, correspondence course teachers for the children, a nurse, and at times a doctor and a dentist.

The trans-Australia railroad is single track much of the 2,461 miles, but there are sidetracks for the Indian-Pacific to slip past freight trains a mile long.

The meals in the dining car, of tourist ship standard, are included in the price of the ticket, and as on ships people quickly become friendly.

The one-way fare of $151.87 first class, $115.44 economy compares with the air fare of $220.24 first or $184.32 economy.

Running of the Indian-Pacific became possible in 1970 with the completion of standard gauge tracks from Perth to Fremantle, and on the "missing link" between Port Pirie in south Australia and Broken Hill in western New South Wales. There used to be different gauges.

People talk of the days 20 years ago, when rail travel across the Nullarbor desert was in stifling hot steam trains with no air-conditioning. In those days they handed out big brown paper bags in which to put your clothes at night to protect them from the dust.

Dear Abby:

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Leave children with trustworthy people

DEAR ABBY: I am divorced with an 8-month-old son, Timmy. Last weekend my boy friend invited me to go to Las Vegas with him, so I left Timmy with a friend I'll call Carol. Carol has no children of her own, but she has practically raised her younger brothers and sisters so I thought my baby would be in good hands.

When I came home and went to pick up Timmy, I was shocked and heartsick. He was all bruised and black and blue. I asked Carol what happened to him, and she said he fell off a chair. Abby, he can hardly sit up, and what would an 8-month-old child be doing on a chair? He looked as if he had been beaten.

I took Timmy home, and now he cries all the time and seems so weak and unhappy. What should I do? Carol won't admit to having beaten him, if that's what she did. I'm so nervous and upset and have no one to talk to. Help me.

YOUNG MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Take the baby to a pediatrician for a thorough examination to determine whether he has suffered internal injuries. You could file charges against Carol for abusing your child, but you would have to prove it, which would be virtually impossible. Next time, leave your baby with one you are sure you can trust.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for six years and have two children. My problem is a husband who never likes to go out, and I do.

Well, one evening my husband's brother came over with his wife. The brother wanted to go out, but his wife didn't. The wife herself suggested that HE take me. My husband told me to go ahead, so I went. I hadn't been out in such a long time I jumped at the chance. We got home around midnight.

I asked a couple of my friends what they thought of this and one said, "You're lucky to have such an understanding husband."

Another said, "Any man who lets his wife go out with another man can't love her. He must be seeing another woman."

What is your opinion? And do you see anything wrong with what I did?

BEWILDERED

DEAR BEE: I'd agree with the first friend. (P S. An occasional night out with your brother in law is all right, but don't make a habit of it.)

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago I had a child out of wedlock. Because I was pregnant, unable to work, and unmarried, I filed for public aid. After the baby came I was advised to file a paternity suit against Roy, the baby's father. Roy admitted paternity, and the court ordered him to pay me child support every month, which he does.

Roy is marrying a girl who lives about 50 miles away. He says his fiancee knows nothing about the child and he has no intentions of telling her. I think he should. The child carries Roy's last name, and if anything should happen to me, he would have to take the child. Roy is 30 years old, makes a very good living, and this will be his first marriage.

Would I be out of line to let Roy's fiancee know about our child? If I were in her place, I'd want someone to tell me!

CONSIDERING IT

DEAR CONSIDERING: Tell Roy he is unrealistic, unfair, and kidding himself if he thinks he can keep this illegitimate child a secret from his wife forever. I would not tell the girl, but I would advise you to urge Roy to before the wedding.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "FED UP IN ASHLAND: If you are "fed up" with people who always drag their kids along to adult parties, don't invite people who always drag their kids along to adult parties.

Churches mostly silent on state lotteries

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States, much of which in the past sponsored gambling officially and then outlawed it, is reviving the practice again in many places.

A "gambling explosion" is on, says the Rev. Dr. Paul M. Minus Jr., of Delaware, Ohio, a professor of church history.

Although the churches generally have remained silent on the matter in recent times, he says they should take up the ethical issues involved in the "country's drift toward the questionable values of a gambling culture."

The particular target of his criticisms, made in the ecumenical weekly, Christian Century, is the spreading pattern of state-run lotteries, legalized in eight states in the last nine years.

Similar steps are being considered in 10 other states. At least 10 states also are thinking of following New York City's lead into the business of operating off-track betting parlors on horse races.

Although most Protestant churches, particularly Methodists and Baptists, traditionally have opposed gambling and hotly challenged widespread moves 18 years ago legalizing bingo games, there has been scant religious reaction to the present trend.

The current moves for state lotteries and other gambling activitias are being pressed as a means of raising needed additional revenue without intensifying the upward spiral of already painfully high taxes.

While Roman Catholicism does not consider gambling sinful in itself, many of its leaders lately have discouraged bingo as a means of fund-raising, but have had little to say about the spread of state gambling operations.

Dr. Minus, who teaches at Ohio's Methodist Theological School, says that for the churches to ignore the expanding gambling pattern is to deny their responsibility to the poor.

He says that while state lotteries attract about the same proportion of participants of each economic stratum, from high-income people to the impoverished, it is the poor who are victimized.

Dr. Minus contends that "in spite of aggressive merchandising, state lotteries have not netted as much revenue" as predicted — usually only a fraction of a per cent of the state budget. Nor, he adds, have they crippled operations of illegal gambling syndicates.

A state lottery was instituted by New Hampshire in 1964, and since has been authorized in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Michigan and Maryland, with others considering it.

The current trend, however, is not the first time states have used lotteries. Between 1790 and 1870, according to Harvard University historian John S. Ezell, 24 of the then 36 states sponsored lotteries to raise money.

BIBLE QUIZ

Once some remarks were made about hidden books of the Bible. It was a lulu. Kept some people actually looking so hard for facts and studying for the revelation they were in a jam, especially since the books were not capitalized, but the truth finally struck numbers of our readers. To others it was a real job. We want it to be a most fascinating few minutes for you. Yes, there will be some that are easy to spot. Others may require judges to determine. We must also admit, it usually takes a minute to find one and there will be loud lamentations when you see how simple it is. One little lady says she brews coffee while she puzzles her brains.

In the paragraph above there are fifteen books of the Bible. Find them!

Something to think about

BY: NED KINZER

When we were infants and toddlers we had but few traits to our character. There, of course, was love and happiness, but mostly, there was confusion. As we grew older, we developed the trait of sorting out this confusion, with understanding, but we also added to our supply of characteristics that of fear, and nothing can be more threatening to one's character than fear. With reasoning, understanding and knowledge, however, fear loses its black visage and becomes just another obstacle which we must hurdle. When arriving at adulthood, we should then be capable of mastering the art of loyalty, trustworthiness and reliability, and if these have been mastered, we might then be able to add another trait to our character, that of leadership.

British hairdresser says customer is always right

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In England the beauty customer is always right, hear, hear.

In fact a hairdresser cannot get her diploma unless she understands the psychology of her relationship with the client. So says pretty Sally Ann Welch 22, of Southampton, England, who recently won the Student of the Year award in competition with 5,000 qualified girls from the United Kingdom.

Sally was in the United States participating in the International Beauty Show in New York as one of her prizes. She was the guest of Roux. She had also received awards from all the hairdressing firms in the United Kingdom.

The House of Parliament now has a law with stringent requirements for hairdressers who must attend a technical school for three years or serve a five-year apprenticeship with school training.

"And the tests are pretty rigid," Sally observed. "First you must write essays. For example, how would you cut the hair of a little child . . or how would you respond to a middle-age woman who might want her hair colored black."

As for styles and shapes, one must be extremely tactful, she insists. Whereas you might say "perhaps you would like to make your face look a bit fuller by pulling your hair out at the side," you wouldn't say "your hair is too high for your long face."

Although in England the Hairdressing Council has the task of improving the course of training, arranging written examinations and the final oral quiz for the eight finalists in the United Kingdom, the judging by a prestigious panel is based on reception, inspection, discussion, action and courtesy (toward clients).

Even before Sally got to that stage, she had earned a diploma from the three-year Portsmouth Technical College where she studied biology, physics and French in addition to the science of hair. And she plans to study for another year so that she can teach.

The English make a big thing of the award she received — it really inflates your ego, said the pretty bride of nine weeks. At a reception attended by members of parliament and the Greater London Council, Sally was presented her trophy — in the shape of a curl of hair — by Sir Cyril English, Director General of the Guilds of London Institute.

Hair styles worn by young English girls are similar to those now being worn by some in America, Sally remarked. Over there the short urchin cut and the page boy called the "Isadora" is very popular with girls who have cut their hair. And some young girls are wearing wigs. But she almost didn't get a chance to size up the situation. Her chaperone, Beverly Ritzen, 24, an executive with the Hair Dressing Council, had been instructed "to lock Sally in her room every night at six o'clock." New York was said to be that dangerous. But they soon were told that such dangers existed only in certain areas, so they ventured outdoors.

In her hair science courses Sally learned to cut the hair of men, a slightly different technique, she says.

"Flowers leave their fragrance on the hand that bestows them," she said.

TV Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Most television announcers got where they are today with perfect diction and deep voices. Wolfman Jack, on the other hand, did it with the taped howls of wolves.

The familiar howls don't usually accompany him in his chores as the regular announcer on the "Midnight Special" pop music show that commences each Saturday at 1 a.m. on NBC-TV.

But they're always heard on his daily rock radio show, which he tapes at his home in Beverly Hills, Calif., and syndicates so slightly more than 1,400 stations in the U.S.

Wolfman probably is totally unknown to older folks. But he's a legend to millions of teen-age listeners and to, say, anyone who still can recite the complete lyrics of "Blue Suede Shoes."

He's mild in person and wild on the air. His delivery is a rapid-fire growl, punctuated now and then by the loud, mournful "OWOOOO" that has been his trademark since 1959.

That was the year the Brooklyn-born disc jockey hit it big with his show from station XERF in Del Rio, Tex., near the Mexican border. It sounds like an unlikely place to become a star.

But the station's transmitter, located across the border in Ciudad Acuna, pumped out 250,000 watts. You could hear Wolfman's howls late at night as far north as Las Vegas and then some.

Wolfman, a stocky man in his late 30s, has been going strong ever since. He was in town this week to discuss a record album, but took time to recount how he got in the howling business.

It all stemmed, he said, from disc jockeys here and in Buffalo who howled or barked on occasion.

"I more or less got the whole thing from them, and that's where the Wolfman Jack name came from," said Wolfman, who has a greying goatee, hates wearing coats and goes about in cowboy boots.

"At midnight, I'd come on with the wolves howling and the down-home blues sound," he said, grinning and giving a quick sample: "This is Wolfman Jack down here with the donkeys gone get you some Soul, man!"

He stayed with his tried-and-tested howls throughout the late 1960s, when many radio stations were doing what he calls "sterilized radio" — de-emphasizing on-air personalities and emphasizing carefully programmed music selections picked out by a consultant.

Wolfman, whose aides insist his real name is Bob Smith, moved to Los Angeles in 1966. He taped his shows there, although they were booked north by a 50,000-watt station, still with his wolf howls, and began syndicating his show, picking up a swarm of new fans in addition to those he'd had right from the XERF days.

He went from underground fame to that of the network variety when tapped to announce on NBC's "Midnight Special" shows.

"They wanted somebody on the show who wasn't a straight announcer, someone who could do different things to give the show the kind of rock image they wanted," he said.

"So they came to me and asked me to do what I do on the radio show. So far, it's worked pretty good."

Wolfman, who is married and has two kids, lives quietly and conventionally, despite his howling success in radio. What music does he like when relaxing from work?

"I really don't listen to music when I'm not on the air," he said. "I listen to it, like 10 hours a day and it's my trade, my profession. You know — a butcher doesn't go home and cut meat.

"I usually like to go home and hear silence. I like to meditate a little bit because I hear sounds all day long."

Hawaiian quake hurts 8 persons; damage moderate

HILO, Hawaii (AP) — An earthquake which shook the Hawaiian island chain did moderate damage to structures in Hilo, the state's second largest city. Police said eight persons were injured, but no deaths were reported.

The tremor struck Thursday with its epicenter located a dozen miles north of Hilo—a sea coast town of 26,000 persons—at a depth of about 25 miles, said Bob Shanks, chief of the state civil defense agency in Honolulu.

"Had it been under Hilo, there would have been greater damage, and probably some loss of life," Shanks said.

Democrats study possible reforms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic party reformers today consider recommendations that include shedding a delegate "quota system" that figured in Sen. George McGovern's presidential nomination.

Lumped together as the Commission on Delegate Selection and Party Structure, the reformers were told by the 1972 convention to study the McGovern rules and recommend changes or improvements. He initially chaired the group.

On the eve of the commission's first meeting, a group of middle-of-the-roaders called for major revision of the McGovern guidelines.

The Coalition for a Democratic Majority recommended a revision of the rule which resulted in the so-called "quotas" for women, minorities and youth in convention delegations.

In place of such a system, the CDM suggested the requirement of a good faith effort to balance delegations.

The object of the recommendations would be elimination of features which enabled McGovern to rise from distant dark horse status to the party's presidential nominee.

The group recommended that the rule on open slatemaking be dropped.

This rule led to Chicago Major Richard Daley's slate of delegates being excluded from last year's convention.

A tactic crucial to McGovern's victory—packing local delegate-selection caucuses—would be prevented by another rule revision.

In addition, the CDM suggested that Democratic governors, senators and House members be made automatic delegates, that state party organizations elect up to 20 per cent of the delegates, and that rules be tightened to prevent defection of delegates won by candidates in primaries.

Man gets life in dual slaying

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — A Stark County Common Pleas Court judge has sentenced Tony Logsdon, 19, of Minerva to life imprisonment for the Dec. 30, 1972, slaying of two women.

Logsdon was sentenced after he pleaded guilty Thursday to lesser charges of second-degree murder. He had been charged with two counts of first-degree murder.

Stark County sheriff's deputies said the two victims, Agnes Anguish, 53, and her daughter, Kathy, 14, were ambushed between their car and their house in Minerva. They had just returned home from the Butterfly Inn in nearby Robertsville.

A friend who followed the Anguishes home at their request told deputies he heard Kathy scream and then heard gunshots. Deputies said Logsdon dated the Anguish girl at one time.

Outlook considered bright for pension plan regulation

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — American workers now have at least $137 billion in private pension assets. Of at least 30 million workers covered, 4.7 million are receiving annual benefits that exceed $7.4 billion a year.

These figures all are minimums, because they were compiled in 1970. Growth since then has been swift in many respects, and assets by 1980 are projected to exceed $250 billion. In 1940 they totaled $2.4 billion.

The consequences grow too, not only for workers covered but for the entire economy of the nation. Even in a trilliondollar economy, a sum in the billions carries great power.

Banks depend upon it, the stock market needs it, corporations rely on it as a source of capital financing. Thousands of bankers, lawyers, trustees and other professionals, and many times that number of ancillary workers, earn their living from it.

And there is still another great consequence, perhaps more potential than real. That is the possibility of fraud, conspiracy or other misuse of funds by those who manage them.

In a comprehensive pension study just released, Bankers Trust describes how "the man on Main Street probably imagines a perpetual series of conspiracies for the control of corporations."

The ingredients of the "plot" are that billions of dollars of stock are held by pension funds, which are managed by banks. Other institutions, like investment trusts and insurers, hold billions more.

Now add to this recipe the fact that "the directors of these institutions know one another and work within the narrow radius of the lower end of Manhattan" and you have the makings of problems.

Despite these major national considerations it is the personal stake in pensions that concerns most workers and their families. And yet many workers know very little of their rights and expectations.

It is for reasons such as these that various congressional committees are studying many proposals to set standards for fiduciary responsibilities, vesting, disclosure of information and funding.

While the complexity of the subject matter and the many varieties of pension plans is slowing action, prospects are bright that Congress will be able to reach agreement on provisions this year and probably pass a bill in 1974.

So far the focus of three main proposals is on vesting.

—A bill submitted by Sens. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and Harrison A. Williams, D-N.J., proposes that after eight years of service a pension be 30 per cent vested.

That means a worker would have a nonforfeitable right to 30 per cent of benefits accrued under terms of the plan, even if he ceased to be an employe. The benefits would be paid on retirement.

Each year thereafter vesting would increase by 10 per cent until, after 15 years, the employe would be 100 per cent vested.

—Rep. John Dent, D-Pa., proposes that after 10 years of service an employe be 100 per cent vested.

—The Nixon administration proposes the rule of 50. When age and service add up to 50, a person becomes 50 per cent vested, that is, entitled to one-half the pension rights accrued under the particular plan, to be paid on retirement.

Vesting would increase 10 per cent a year after the rule of 50 applied, so that rights to a full pension would be reached in another five years.

How do you determine if you are vested?

A new federal regulation expected to become effective July 31 would require employers to make available to workers the pertinent facts regarding their plan in laymen's terms.

O'Grady, patrolmen win insurance awards

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Association of Insurance Agents presented state Highway Safety Director Eugene O'Grady with a plaque Thursday in recognition for his leadership in the highway safety field.

Also receiving plaques during the group's mid-year conference were state Highway Patrol officers Richard P. Wells and John E. Spitler, both of the Piqua post, for recovering seven stolen cars each.

The association also presented the patrolmen with vacation trips to Hawaii for winning the Patrol's "Blue Max" award competition by recovering the most stolen vehicles.

Canada's first settlers relied on wildlife — deer, fish, fowl, buffalo and rabbits — and their meat needs.

'MA THICKET' is the affectionate nickname Mrs. Ethel Osborne Hill of Port Arthur, Tex., garnered in her fight to save the Big Thicket region from additional development.

Senior citizen leads conservation battle

By DIANA RINEHART
Leader Staff Writer

ORANGE, Tex. (AP) — If you've ever used the term "over-the-hill gang" in reference to our nation's senior citizens, you better change your tune quick!

Especially if you are going to meet 94-year-old Mrs. Ethel Osborne Hill of Port Arthur.

She's a conservationist, naturalist, author, lecturer, educator and member of the governor's committees on aging. The only hills this extraordinary woman is going over are those which lead to her next lecture, committee meeting or her beloved cabin in the Big Thicket area.

Widely known from the Sabine River through the piney woods all the way to Austin, Mama Hill, as she's affectionately known, has been the guiding light, constant energizer and perpetual motion of the "save the Big Thicket" program in Texas and the nation. In fact, she also is known as "Ma Thicket."

SHE IS the only living member of the original 10-member Big Thicket Association formed in 1930. Each summer she returns to her log cabin home deep in the Thicket, a half mile from the highway, southeast of Woodville.

There she is close to the trees, leaves, animals, flowers and land she loves. It includes her friends, the Alabama-Coushetta Indians, whose tribal village is only 16 miles away.

From her summer base she gathers materials from the land. All are to be used during the winter months, back in her Port Arthur home, to make her nature handicrafts.

As Mama Hill says, "There's nothing that is nothing. Everything is something."

From all these somethings like a fallen twig, armadillo bones, leaves, shells, stones, feathers, petals, pine cones, she will create a picture, bookmark, paper weight, pencil holder, anything!

SHARING her creative talents and keen imagination with others, Mama Hill has taught handicrafts each summer for the past 14 years to young people at the United Methodist District Encampment near Palestine.

She also spends three weeks each summer at scout camps in Tyler County teaching crafts as well as her own Cub Scout Troop in Woodville.

Mama Hill's love affair with nature started when she was 6 years old, a time she vividly remembers.

Born in Ames, Iowa, she remembers Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, a friend of her father and president of A&M College at Ames, who first taught her the beauty of all God's creatures.

"We would go for long walks in the orchard or down by the streams," recalled Mama Hill, "Dr. Knapp would show me the veins in the leaves and tell me how each one was special.

"No two were alike. Just like you hands, he said, there are no two hands alike. All hands are special," she remembers.

MAMA HILL brought her love of trees, animals and flowers along when the family moved to Texas in 1887. As she says, "I never was a Yankee; always a Texan."

And as a Texan she has implanted her mark of love and concern on everything she's touched.

Her journalistic endeavors for preservation of the Big Thicket began in 1926 when she wrote a series of articles for an area newspaper.

She continued writing for a number of area newspapers and still writes a weekly column for the Tyler County Booster and Piney Wood Press.

She has captured her thoughts and memories in three books of poetry, all of which have been published. Last year she completed a book of stories on early years in the Thicket titled, "God's Children, All — Red, White and Black."

"I'm still waiting to have it published," related Mama Hill, "actually, I guess you'd say I'm waiting to get the money together to have it published."

A FRIEND to the young, old, well-known and unknown, Mama Hill was named "Woman of the Year" in Texas in 1970. Her most recent honor was bestowed when she was named a life member of the Tyler County Chamber of Commerce and honored for her outstanding civic work.

A new variety of dogwood tree, planted last Arbor Day, stands in the courthouse square in Woodville — named in her honor.

With 94 years of living behind her, Mama Hill has never had a headache, nor an earache. In fact, she doesn't even wear glasses.

"I tell my young students," said Mama Hill, "life is like going from one grade to another. You wouldn't want to stay in the second grade all your life.

"Old age is the pinnacle of life. You have so many things to remember. So much to share with others. I wouldn't want to be young again.

"The only thing," concluded Mama Hill, "I wish I could live for 94 more years. There are so many things I still want to do."

Women ROTC students do surprisingly well

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — A campus beauty queen showed up at her first military formation with an ice cream cone. One girl appeared in the Army office wearing a fatigue jacket and short shorts. And three of 45 women students have dropped out of the program completely.

Otherwise, the men in charge of the new women's Army ROTC program at Pennsylvania State University say the five-year test project is off to a smooth start.

"We're finding the girls are setting a high academic trend," said Maj. John Riddiford. He organized Penn State's program which the Army started last fall for freshmen women in 10 campuses.

"All of the scholarship winners had higher Scholastic Aptitude Test scores than any of the men ever had," Riddiford said.

Women at Penn State hold six of 20 new Army ROTC scholarships for coeds. Each is valued at about $11,000.

According to Army spokesmen, the women's ROTC program has several purposes: to determine if it will be expanded to the more than 290 schools now offering ROTC to men, to offer equal military opportunities to women and to catch up with the Air Force and Navy which already have opened their ROTC ranks to women.

The purpose of ROTC is to train a sufficient number of active duty and reserve Army officers.

The Air Force program, started in 1970, has 1,426 women ranging from freshmen to seniors. "It's been going extremely well," said Maj. John Duemmel, an Air Force spokesman. "The program will continue."

The Navy first began including women in its ROTC program in March 1972, but they could apply only for 16 openings in a scholarship program.

"Next year, 100 women will be eligible to join the non-scholarship program as well," said Lt. Cmdr. Dale Pearson, head of the Navy's college recruiting. "From an interest standpoint, it's been very successful."

So far, 212 women participate in the Army ROTC program nationally. Of these, 42 are at Penn State.

Why do they join?

"It offers an opportunity to be more than an office girl when you graduate," said Martha Lower, 19, of Altoona, Pa. "There seem to be greater opportunities in terms of responsibility."

"I like being the first of a new breed," said Susan Rodems, an 18-year old liberal arts major from Syracuse, N.Y., and ROTC scholarship winner.

"The starting salary is better for second lieutenants than for school teachers," said a third girl. "And besides, it's a good way to meet men."

Capt. Stephen Linthwaite, the freshmen's 25-year-old instructor, said the women's presence in ROTC has not posed many problems.

"Except for little things," he said, "like deciding the length of uniform hems—a good two inches above the knee is acceptable—and finding shoes that weren't thick rubber-soled clunkers, it's gone pretty smoothly.

"Some of the men were skeptical at first, but now the seniors are wondering why this didn't happen three years ago."

Except for not teaching weapons' handling and flying, the women ROTC curriculum doesn't differ from the men's training.

Coeds are expected to drill with the men, attend summer camp between their junior and senior years and receive commissions as second lieutenants after graduating.

Army regulations stipulate that women cannot participate in flight instruction, airborne training, field combat training and activities "beyond the normal physical strength of women." They are not required to bear arms or participate in marksmanship training.

Most of the women interviewed said they didn't care about the restriction—"I'm gun-shy" was a common response.

One of the women's chief complaints is that their friends sometimes tease them about joining ROTC.

"The guys you go out with think you're either a nymphomanic or a lesbian if you want to join the Army," said one indignant woman. "I don't hate men. I have a boy friend."

Besides Penn State, the other schools participating in the program are Eastern Kentucky University, Richmond, Ky.; Florida State University, Tallahassee, Fla.; South Carolina State College, Orangeburg, S.C.; Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind.; Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, La.; Texas A & I University, Kingsville, Tex.; South Dakota State University, Brookings, S.D.; Arizona State University, Tempe, Ariz.; and University of Hawaii, Honolulu.

Seek Kansas City escapee for $93,000 bank robbery

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The FBI and local police said they are searching for Earl Edwin Austin, 31, an escapee from the Jackson County Jail in Kansas City, in connection with the $93,000 holdup of a bank in suburban Whitehall Thursday.

Whitehall police said Austin, also wanted for a March 15 robbery in Dayton, was believed to be in the company here of three other men sought for bank robberies in New Orleans; Tulsa, Okla., and Iowa.

The others are Gary Williams, 25, Kenneth Greathouse, 26, and Jim Murphy, 32. Greathouse and Murphy also escaped from the Kansas City jail, but at different times, according to police.

Whitehall police said a car sold to a local dealer Monday was identified as the one used in the Dayton holdup and Austin and Greathouse were identified as having stayed in a motel near the bank Monday.

The Ohio State Bank in Whitehall's Great Eastern Shopping Center was held up by a man who handed the manager, Donald Dozer, a note announcing the robbery and then instructed Dozer to walk with him into the vault.

The man, armed with a .38-caliber revolver, filled one sack with cash and took two others that already were full. He then walked with Dozer out the door and fled, presumably in an auto that was seen parked in the rear of the building with its engine running.

Dozer was left outside the bank.

Officials said other bank employes and customers apparently were unaware the holdup was taking place.

The robbery was one of the largest ever in this area. Whitehall police said an armored truck was due to pick up the cash just minutes after the robbery occurred.

As the grains of sand slowly make their way through the glass enclosure of the hour glass. . .it is once again time to remember the best sandwich in town.

Action taken in kidnap case

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Two children allegedly kidnapped in Pennsylvania were ordered returned to their parents Thursday by a Montgomery County Juvenile Court judge.

The children, Faith Ann Richter, 3, and her sister, Jennie Lynn, 4 months, were ordered returned to Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Richter of Lorain, Ohio.

They allegedly were taken by Donald E. Seymour, 41, and his wife, Linda, 29, of Dayton, while the Richter family resided temporarily in Pennsylvania.

ORCHIDS AND OLD AGE — Mrs. Sarah C. Jackson sniffs an orchid from her bed at Sara Mayo hospital in New Orleans, La., where she is recovering from major surgery. Hospital officials say that Mrs. Jackson, who is 103, may be the oldest person ever to recover from a major operation.

Mass transit backers lose round

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A recommendation to change the Ohio Constitution to authorize use of earmarked highway funds for other forms of transportation — namely mass transit — has hit another snag in the Ohio Constitutional Revision Commission.

After a three hour session Thursday that produced no agreement, the commission voted 11-6 to send it back to its Committee on Taxation which studied it several months.

The powerful highway lobby is fighting the change with assertions that revenues derived from highway use taxes are now not sufficient for highways and will not be in the future. Two of their spokesmen testified before the commission at Thursday's meeting.

Members are studying a proposal to recommend to the legislature that an amendment be placed before the voters to allow use of highway tax revenues for other purposes upon two-thirds approval of the legislature.

James W. Shocknessy, chairman of the Ohio Turnpike Commission and a member of the commission, offered an amendment that would have reduced the legislative margin for fund shifts from two-thirds to a simple majority. After debate, his amendment failed 9-10.

Another unsuccessful amendment would have changed the proposal to recommend to the legislature that the entire constitutional sections containing the restriction be repealed. It lost 8-11.

Sen. Oliver Ocasek, D-27 Akron, a member of the Committee on Taxation, said he was concerned about "the deep division" among members over what to do, and moved that the proposal be returned to committee. His motion carried 11-6.

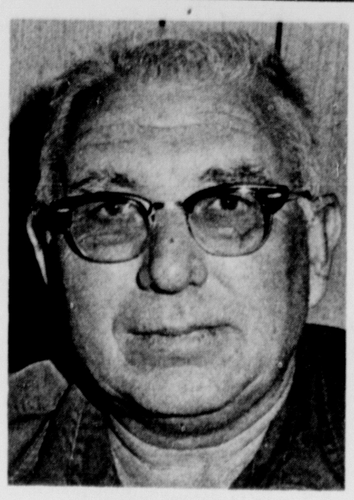

Commission Chairman Richard Carter of Fostoria asked the committee to have new proposals ready for the next meeting when "it will be made the first order of business."

Trustees, clerks hear speakers

Judge sees 'Rock and Roll' as Communistic 'disease'

Common Pleas Court Judge Evelyn W. Coffman was the guest speaker Thursday night at a dinner meeting of the Township Clerks and Trustees Association, hosted by County Engineer Charles P. Wagner in the Mahan Building.

Judge Coffman's topic was "Rock and Roll Music" in which she discussed the Communistic influence of youth through music.

Judge Coffman said a Communist leader in America has stated that the youth would be reached through music.

Referring to various research sources, she said the beat of rock music is not only heard, but felt, placing people in a semi-hypnotic state in which they can be sold on anything.

SHE LISTED several rock bands whose members are users of illegal drugs, and related the story of one band leader who was arrested in Miami, Fla., by the U. S. Attorney General's office for presenting a lewd and indecent exhibition at a concert attended by 14,000 youth with an average age of 12 to 14 years.

Quoting Newsweek Magazine, she stated that 95 per cent of the 500,000 persons who attended the Woodstock Rock Festival were smoking marijuana.

Judge Coffman also cited a case in which a teenager listening to rock music committed a murder, and another case in which a daily diet of rock music caused a 14-year-old boy to become maladjusted.

She said the titles of the songs being played speak for themselves and referred directly to: "Hashish," "Sodomy," "Walking In Space" and "Strawberry Fields Forever."

SHE SAID that when rock and roll was originated about 10 years ago it was termed "heathenistic, atheistic and immoral." She said that at that time a short life was predicted for this type music, but instead it has gone to the top.

She pointed out that adults are unable to understand the words of the rock music, but the kids do. "This music is more than music. It is a dreaded disease," Judge Coffman said.

OTHER SPEAKERS at the dinner meeting were Richard Keiser, of the engineer's office; Dr. William E. Covert, health commissioner, and Wagner.

Keiser said that effective May 1, all deeds must go to the engineer's office before they are recorded. Also, plats will be required for all new surveys or renewed descriptions of land parcels.

He said the reason for the changes is the increased building and subdivision of land in the county.

Dr. Covert reviewed the financial situation of the Health Department and informed the trustees that an additional tax levy for health services would probably appear on the November ballot. He said the need for additional funds has been precipitated by a drop in personal property taxes, the Homestead Act, 10 per cent rollback on real estate taxes and inflation.

Wagner reported that the continued rainfall is causing several culverts to collapse. He said six bridge projects are being planned for this summer.

Workers off across Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Millions of Japanese got a holiday from work today, thanks to a three-day transport strike kicking off the annual spring labor offensive for higher wages.

More than three million workers struck at dawn for 72 hours. The walkout was led by employes of the government and private railway companies, but they were joined by harbor workers, telephone and telegraph operators, postoffice employes, hospital staffs, teachers and workers in government offices.

Workers on the privately owned railways called off their walkout this afternoon after winning a $55.47 monthly wage boost.

But the 250,000 employes of the National Railways stayed out as negotiations continued on their demands for an average hike of $78 monthly, the right to strike for themselves and all other government employes, and an admission from the government that past disciplinary action against them was too harsh.

More than 24 million people were unable to get to work. The private rail workers agreed to settle early in the afternoon, but by then nearly 18,000 trains had been immobilized.

About 380 helmeted radical students demonstrating in support of the strikers were arrested outside a Tokyo station and charged with obstructing police.

The big department stores and many other businesses did not open. Many offices were closed. Some companies got their employes to work by car or special buses, while others laid out mattresses on the premises for those who refused to go home Thursday night.

One of the two major domestic airlines was struck. The sleek, high-speed trains of the Tokyo-Osaka-Okayama line thinned out to one every two hours; normally they leave Tokyo and Osaka every 15 minutes.

Woman killed by twister

BATH, N.C. (AP) — A Beaufort County woman was killed and her husband injured early today when a tornado struck their mobile home.

A spokesman for the Beaufort County sheriff's department said the twister touched down at 5 a.m. at a trailer occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Buck Brinn west of Bath.

Brinn was hospitalized with injuries believed to be serious, the spokesman said.

The National Weather Service said its first notice of the tornado came from the Beaufort County Civil Defense Agency following the incident.

Further details were not immediately available.

Youth, 17, stabbed; officers seek dad

Sheriff's deputies are looking for a Bloomingburg man who allegedly stabbed his son during a family quarrel Thursday night.

Officers said Jimmy McCallister, 17, Rt. 1, Bloomingburg, was treated at Memorial Hospital for a stab wound in his left chest and later released. His father, Oval McCallister, is wanted for questioning.

According to investigating officers, the youth and his father were involved in a fight at the family's Myers Road home. They said McCallister reportedly stabbed his son with a butcher knife after the youth had hit him with a chair. McCallister had the knife concealed in his trousers, officers said.

The elder McCallister fled following the stabbing and is still being sought.

A 1971 MODEL trail bike was stolen from the patio of the Gloria Morris home, Good Hope. She told officers the theft occurred Tuesday evening. The bike was valued at $366.

Kenneth L. Petitt, Rt. 4, reported the theft of 20 rods of wire fencing from a field along Ohio 41, just south of Inskeep Road. Petitt said that he was constructing a new fence in the field and had left the fence there Wednesday night. The roll, valued at $75, was gone Thursday morning.

Sheriff's deputies recovered a truck that apparently had been stolen from Miami, Fla., earlier this month. The truck was discovered parked in the lot at the Union 76 Plaza, I-71 and U. S. 35, Wednesday evening.

Officers said the truck had been rented for one day from a Miami rental firm on April 3, but had never been returned. The truck was impounded on the station lot.

Teachers protest Fairfield cutback

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The State Teachers Guild of Ohio said it was planning a rally at the Statehouse today to protest the proposed cutback of 25 teaching positions at the Fairfield School for Boys.

The guild is an affiliate of the Ohio AFL-CIO and represents teachers and social workers at state institutions.

Charles W. DeGrove, spokesman for the group, said the Ohio Youth Commission's planned cutback will eliminate at least 25 positions at tha school.

He said no provisions are being made for those teachers who may be laid off.

Private ownership of gold supported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Since 1934, U.S. citizens have been forbidden by law to own or trade in gold as an investment. For all that time varying numbers of them have been trying to have the ban repealed.

Now, in the wake of two devaluations of the dollar, opponents of the gold-ownership ban may be closer than ever to achieving their goal. But the odds still appear to be against any permission in the near future for private individuals in this country to operate freely in the gold market.

Legislation to formalize the second dollar devaluation carried out during President Nixon's administration gave the gold-ownership forces a chance to press their cause. Before the Senate passed the devaluation bill, they succeeded in attaching an amendment repealing the gold-ownership ban as of Dec. 31, 1973.

The legislation is not as far along in the House, where the Banking Committee still has to pass on it. A subcommittee has approved a provision repealing the prohibition—but effective only when the president makes a finding that the international monetary situation has been stabilized enough to make such a move advisable.

Unless this provision is changed by the full committee or the entire House to conform with the Senate language, it will be up to a conference committee—and ultimately the two chambers—to agree on the terms that finally become effective.

Both Nixon's administration and the autonomous Federal Reserve Board contend that, while there no longer is any long-range justification for maintaining the rigid prohibition on gold ownership, a change now could hamper forthcoming international discussions aimed at stabilizing the world monetary system and set up another speculative assault against the dollar.

Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., who tried unsuccessfully to persuade the House Banking subcommittee to adopt the language of the Senate amendment, and Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, author of the amendment, have argued that the Treasury's own announced policy of diminishing the importance of gold in the world monetary system is an argument for permitting private ownership.

Prince Charles gets promotion

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles, the heir to the British throne, will be promoted to acting lieutenant in the Royal Navy on May 1, the Ministry of Defense announced today.

With the promotion from sub-lieutenant, the 24-year-old prince's navy pay will go up from $5,250 to $6,625. But Charles, who reportedly gets half a million dollars a year as Prince of Wales and Duke of Cornwall, has been giving his navy pay to navy charities.

The defense ministry said the promotion was routine since he will complete 18 months on duty on May 1. He is serving as assistant navigation officer on the survey ship Fox in the West Indies.

BUILDING STRONGER FLOOD WALL — A bulldozer levels top of rock and dirt built around subdivision in Arnold, Mo. The sandbag wall that had been built was not holding back flood waters. Residents hopefully watch the work. Arnold is situated along the Meramec River.

Driver charged after collision

A driver was cited in one of three traffic mishaps investigated in the city-county area Thursday.

Police charged Gerald L. Ragland, 37, of 436 Broadway, with failure to yield right of way after a two-car collision on Columbus Avenue, just east of Elm Street at 3:56 p.m.

Officers said the Ragland car pulled from the drive at Washington Square into the path of an eastbound car driven by Brenda K. Oesterle, 21, Rt. 5. Damage was moderate.

A car driven by John A. Stiffler, 65, of 1222 S. Hinde St., and a truck driven by Edward E. Knisley, 37, Rt. 2, were involved in a minor accident at the intersection of Fayette Street and Ohio Avenue Thursday afternoon.

Stiffler told police his foot slipped off the brake as he stopped on Ohio Avenue and the car rolled forward, hitting the truck in the right side. The truck was turning off Fayette Street at the time.

Sheriff's deputies investigated a hitskip accident at Webb's Grocery, Waterloo, Tuesday morning. Officers said a car had pulled onto the store lot and struck a gas pump, then drove away. Damage was minor.

Demonstration by students hits Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The Central Organization of Workers called an emergency meeting today to "mobilize immediately in defense of the government" following demonstrations against the Marxist regime by most of Santiago's 110,000 high school students.

Jorge Godoy, the Socialist president of the country's labor federation, promised that workers would make daily demonstrations in support of the government.

The labor chieftain met late Thursday with President Salvador Allende.

"We will not tolerate any insolence from the reactionaries," Godoy said. He claimed Thursday's young demonstrators were "politically manipulated" and their parents "should order them off the streets."

There were continuous disturbances in the city Thursday, and more than 250 persons were arrested and 100 hurt. One student threw a Molotov cocktail against the presidential palace, and a barrage of cobblestones broke more than 30 of the palace windows.

Calm was restored by evening. But in a 20-block area downtown shop windows were broken, rocks and smouldering debris littered the streets and tear gas hung in the air.

Test developed

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston scientist says his team's development of a test to measure minute amounts of marijuana in the blood is a big breakthrough in marijuana research.

Dr. David C. Fenimore's findings were made in rabbits, but the researcher said Thursday he hopes human blood studies can start within six months.

Claim fewer people now get tattoos

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fewer people and more animals are getting tattoos, the National Geographic Society says.

A survey indicates that the concern of health authorities about disease from contaminated needles largely has prompted the closing of many tattoo parlors throughout the world, a society spokesman said Thursday.

In a report on the tattoo front, the society said:

"As more tattoo parlors close in the world's seaports, the number of people acquiring epidermal artwork is declining. But growing numbers of pets and livestock now sport tattoos.

"For several years, race horses have had identifying numbers tattooed inside their lips to prevent 'fixing' a race by substituting a skillfully dyed faster horse for one originally entered.

"Poultry farmers brand their turkeys with tattoos under the wings to facilitate recovery in case of theft. And dog owners have begun putting registered marks or numbers inside their pet's ears to combat dognapers."

Time bomb hits barracks

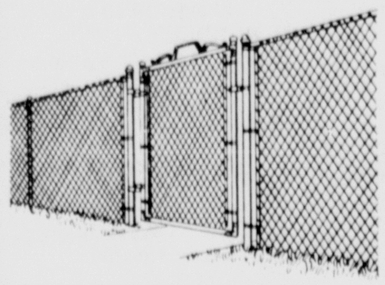

BELFAST (AP) — A time bomb planted in a car blew up a British army barracks in Armagh today, wrecking five cars and slightly injuring several persons.

The bomb presumably was the work of the Irish Republican Army, but neither the IRA nor the British army had any immediate comment about this.

CLAY CARROLL

Reds entertain Phillies tonight

Carroll hopes to end tragic pitching start

CINCINNATI (AP) — Clay Carroll used to plow the garden behind his parents' Alabama home, a fact some fans won't let him forget.

"That's the only plowing I ever did, it honestly is," says the swaggering, barrel-chested Cincinnati Reds relief pitcher, who's off to a miserable start this season after taking "fireman of the year" honors in 1972.

Carroll was irritated after a game in Atlanta late last season, a leather-lunged fan having greeted his mount appearance with a raucous, "Hey, plowboy!"

Later, during the National League playoffs with Pittsburgh, the same voice intoned the same message at Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium.

"I guess he must have been following me around," laughs Carroll, a good natured, gentle 202-pounder whose late-inning heroics netted him a major league record 37 saves last season.

The heckler hasn't shown his face, or voice, this season, but neither has Carroll's pitching touch.

In six appearances totaling two and two-thirds innings, Carroll has allowed seven hits, six earned runs and four walks. His earned run average is a lofty 18.00, compared to the 2.25 ERA he posted last year.

"I know I haven't been doing the job," Carroll said. "Everyone can see that. But, you know, the last couple years I started slow, and I really came back later. I'll be back, you can be sure of that."

Carroll's positive attitude is a product of his days in the minor leagues in towns like Quad City, Boise and Austin.

"I remember down there I'd lose one, and I'd hang my head down," he recalls. "I'd look at the other guys and wonder what they were thinking. You just can't do that."

Carroll, 31, a fast ball specialist who came here from Atlanta in 1968, took advantage of an off-day Thursday to throw hard for 20 minutes along with Tom Hall, another Cincinnati reliever who's having early season troubles.

Carroll said the session helped.

"I threw all my pitches," he drawled, "and I feel much better. I think I've got things worked out now. I just need some work.

"That's the thing I like about relief pitching," he mused. "When you don't do well, you've always got a chance the next day. You can come right back."

The next day for Carroll could be tonight. The Reds host Philadelphia in the opener of a three-game series.

Cincinnati's Ross Grimsley, 3-0, will oppose Philadelphia ace Steve Carlton, 3-2, in a battle of lefthanders.

RAP SESSION UNDER THE BELL — Emory Luck, left, new head basketball coach at Northern Illinois University at DeKalb, chats with Jim Bradley, one of the team's outstanding players, near a campus landmark. Luck, who holds a doctor of philosophy degree in administration, has had experience as an educator, counselor, recruiter and coach.

MT cage fete slated Monday

A fine crowd is expected to attend Miami Trace's annual basketball banquet Monday night.

Tickets for the 6:30 p.m. banquet, sponsored by the Miami Trace boosters club, can be purchased at the high school, at the Washington Paint and Glass Co., 125 N. Fayette St., or at the door.

Bobby Knight, head basketball coach at Indiana University, will be featured speaker for the affair which will honor members of the 1972-73 Miami Trace team which won a South Central Ohio League co-championship and the Southeastern District Class AAA tournament title.

Reserve and freshman teams in addition to the cheerleading squads will also be honored.

Lion spikers salvage tie in meet with MT, Falcons

Washington C. H.'s track team received strong support from the individuals in the running events to salvage a tie with Franklin Heights Thursday night in a triangular meet at Miami Trace.

Head coach John Armstrong's Blue Lion thinclads and Franklin Heights finished with 55 points apiece and Miami Trace was only six points off the pace with 49 markers.

The Lions stacked up five victories in the running events of the meet which was not decided until the mile relay, the final running event of the meet.

FRANKLIN HEIGHTS landed only four first place finishes, but made up the difference with eight seconds. Miami Trace won four of the five field events and only one running event.

Washington C. H.'s 880-yard relay team turned in a sparkling 1:36.8 winning performance with Randy East, Jeff Willis, Brian Storm and Chuck Wilson.

Storm, a senior speedster, was one of the double winners in the meet as he won the 100 and 220-yard dashes. Sophomore Ron Warnock, of Miami Trace, won the shot put and discus events and the only other twin-winner was Gary Jones, of Franklin Heights, as he captured the long jump and low hurdles.

Mets nudge Houston, 2-1

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's a good thing that Tug McGraw doesn't listen to his catcher. Duffy Dyer said, "screwball" and McGraw replied, "fastball."

The New York Mets' star relief pitcher then threw the pitch of his choice past Cesar Cedeno for a key strikeout that helped preserve a 2-1 victory over the Houston Astros Thursday night.

"I shook off Dyer three times before he called the fastball," said McGraw about a tense ninth-inning situation. "I had thrown screwball, screwball and curveball. I just felt that I could get the fastball past him, and that's what happened."

McGraw, who had entered the game after starter Jim McAndrew pitched seven innings, gave up a leadoff single in the ninth to ex-Met Tommie Agee that put the potential winning run at the plate.

McGraw got Tommy Helms on a fly ball before striking out the heavy-hitting Cedeno. Then Bob Watson bounced out and McGraw had his fourth save of the young season.

The San Francisco Giants defeated the Chicago Cubs 7-3 in the only other National League game played Thursday. In the American League, the Detroit Tigers beat the Texas Rangers 3-2; the Milwaukee Brewers notched a 7-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals and the Oakland A's nipped the Cleveland Indians 3-2.

Chris Speier and Gary Thomasson batted in two runs each as San Francisco won its fourth straight game and ninth in the last 10. The victory put the high-riding Giants 2½ games up over Cincinnati in the NL West.

"I can't remember when we swept a series over the Cubs in Wrigley Field," said San Francisco Manager Charlie Fox. "But it's a good, good feeling to come in here and win three in a row."

Aurelio Rodriguez capped a three-run rally in the ninth inning with a two-run triple, powering the Tigers over the Rangers. Just an inning before, the Rangers had broken up a scoreless pitching duel between Detroit's Woody Fryman and Texas' Pete Broberg with a run on Ken Suarez' double.

Dave May topped a five-run rally in the ninth inning with a grand slam home run as Milwaukee beat Kansas City. May's dramatic blast came after Kansas City pitcher Bruce Dal Canton had intentionally walked Pedro Garcia to load the bases.

"I wasn't thinking 'home run'—I just wanted to get the ball in the air," said May. "I didn't think it was going out. The ball hit down on the lower part of the bat, very low. I've hit lots of balls better."

Bert Campaneris's basesloaded single provided the winning run as the A's rallied in the ninth to beat the Indians. Campaneris' hit to right-center scored pinch-runner John Odom from third base to give the victory to relief pitcher Darold Knowles.

Washington C. H.'s golf team registered its first win of the spring campaign Thursday night in a quadrangular meet with Wilmington, Hillsboro and Unioto at the Washington Country Club.

Senior Chuck Bath swatted a six-over-par 42 score to set the pace for Washington C. H. in the match. David Garringer fired a 45, while sophomore Jeff Brown turned in a 46.

Hillsboro's Mike Frydryk was the Medalist of the match, carding a one-over-par 37. Unioto turned in some nifty scores as John Evans carded a 38 and Jeff Brock and Jamie Kysor had identical 39s.

Panther game called because of darkness

Miami Trace's unbeaten baseball team fought Chillicothe to a 3-3 deadlock Thursday night in a game which was called after eight innings because of darkness.

Head coach Dave Pellior's Panthers had to come from behind to salvage the tie as Chillicothe jumped to a 3-0 lead after two innings of play.

The Panthers bounced back with runs in the fourth and fifth innings and knotted the contest with a run in the seventh.

Senior Dave Arnold started for Miami Trace and was charged with all three Chillicothe runs. Arnold scattered seven hits, fanned five and walked two. Randy Reiber hurled the final two innings and came up with a pair of strikeouts.

All-South Central Ohio League infielder Tony Grooms sparked Miami Trace's 10-hit attack with a double and a single while Pete Jones and Jeff Spears had two hits each. Jones also scored all three of Miami Trace's runs.

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — First period goals by Rick Newell and Ron Simpson gave the Virginia Red Wings a 2-0 victory over the Cincinnati Swords Thursday night and evened their best-of-seven American Hockey League Calder Cup semifinal playoffs at two games apiece.

Prep grid playoff sites are selected

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The Ohio High School Athletic Association is making a rerun of its title sites for the first state football playoffs last fall.

Akron's Rubber Bowl, with 38,000 seats; Massillon High School, seating 21,000, and Ohio Wesleyan University, accommodating 8,000, were awarded the 1973 championship games Thursday by the OHSAA state board of control.

All will be played Friday, Nov. 23, with the Class A finalists at Ohio Wesleyan playing in the afternoon.

The Class AAA championship in the Rubber Bowl and the Class AA finale at Massillon are scheduled at night.

The OHSAA experimented with different days for its playoffs last year, but Commissioner Harold Meyer told the board, "We have found that fans think of Friday as the traditional high school football time."

In line with that, the semifinals games in all classes wll be played Friday night, Nov. 16.

The Class AAA semifinals match the Southeastern and Southwestern Regional champions at the University of Cincinnati and the Northeastern and Northwestern victors in the Rubber Bowl.

In Class AA, it will be the Southwestern vs. the Southeastern at Lancaster and the Northeastern vs. the Northwestern at Massillon.

In Class A, the Southeastern winner draws the Northwestern winner at Mansfield and the Northeastern and Southwestern champions play at Upper Arlington.

The regional winners are determined by weekly computerized ratings compiled by a Columbus firm for the OHSAA.

'Coachie' enjoys her job as Olentangy golf mentor

DELAWARE, Ohio (AP)— Olentangy High School golfers affectionately call Sue Heisler "Coachie."

The first woman to coach the boys' sport for an Ohio school took the job as a lark. Now it's a serious business for her.

"It started as a joke. Our regular golf coach resigned after school started in the fall. I knew I would take a razzing from the students," she said.

Now Miss Heisler, an Ohio University coed at this time last year, sounds like her male coaching rivals.

"They are a young team, a team of the future," said Miss Heisler, 23, a native of Ravenna who comes from an athletic family.

Her brother Yank, an Akron banker, was twice Ohio high school golf champion. Her dad Bob, president of a Ravenna iron firm, is in the Ohio Wesleyan University Hall of Fame.

"What's really sad is that I have five younger sisters and none of them plays golf. It just kills me," said Miss Heisler, her hazel eyes snapping.

Despite her status, Miss Heisler is not a women's libber. In fact, an Ohio High School Athletic Association rule prohibiting girls from boys' sports draws her support.

"I think that's the way it should be, boys against boys and girls against girls," said the woman, who has played golf since she was 9.

"I shoot in the mid-80s when I'm playing regularly," said Miss Heisler, who played three seasons with the Ohio University women's team.

She said rival male golf coaches have shown no animosity toward her.

"They've been very pleasant," she said. "They open doors and buy coffee for me."

Miss Heisler doubles as the Delaware County school's junior high school cheerleader adviser. She said there's no comparison between coaching boys and girls.

"The boys are easier to coach. You only have to tell them once. They listen to you," she said before an afternoon of spotting flaws in her golfers' grips and swings.

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Joe Stallworth, described as "one of the best jumpers I've seen," by the coach who successfully recruited him, has signed a letter of intent to enroll at the University of Cincinnati.

Knicks hope to oust Celts

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Silas and Dave DeBusschere, two of the best rebounders and defensive forwards in basketball, will resume their private war within a war tonight when the New York Knicks seek to end their National Basketball Association playoff series against the Boston Celtics.

The Knicks lead the Celtics 3-2 in the best-of-7 Eastern Conference finals and a victory in tonight's nationally televised (ABC, 9 p.m., EST) game would move them into the NBA finals against the defending champion Los Angeles Lakers, who beat Golden State 4-1 in the West.

Meanwhile, the American Basketball Association's championship playoff series between the Kentucky Colonels and Indiana Pacers gets under way Saturday in a nationally televised game at Louisville, Ky.

Both those teams finished second during the regular season, but Kentucky defeated Carolina 4-3 for the East Division title and Indiana took Utah 4-2 for the West Division crown.

Silas, the 6-foot-7 veteran who came to the Celtics from Phoenix following last season in exchange for the rights to Charlie Scott, was an unlikely hero in Boston's 98-97 victory in Game No. 5 Wednesday night. He scored just nine points—but they included a 30-foot bank shot that was the Celtics' only basket in the final eight minutes, and two free throws with seven seconds left on the clock which put the Celtics on top for good.

DeBusschere, meanwhile, has does his usual workmanlike job, which has been good enough to earn him All-Star and All-NBA defensive team honors. He's averaging 17.8 points and 9.4 rebounds per game against Boston, and knows he'll have to concentrate on keeping Silas away from the boards.

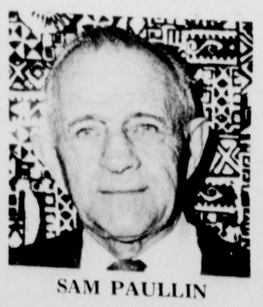

If the Celtics win, the seventh and deciding game will be played in Boston Sunday afternoon. If not, the Knicks go on to meet Los Angeles—and Boston, the team with the best regular-season record in the NBA, will go home.

Steele Data Processing Plans major expansion

KEYPUNCHERS — These girls, who work at Steele Data Processing, Inc., punch the keyboards of National Cash Register Co. 735's, translating ordinary written material into magnetic tape for use in computers. Some of them strike the keyboard 19,000 times an hour, or 5 times a second.

By GEORGE MALEK

Steel Data Processing, Inc., has purchased the Chakeres Building, next door to the firm's present location, 240 E. Court St., and the Ohio Employment Service office, which now occupies the Chakeres Building, will soon vacate in order to allow for the enlargement and expansion of SDP services.

The company, formed by President Marie Steele and her husband, Jim, in 1968, has grown from a staff of four at that time to the present level of 90, including 49 persons who work at a branch office in Portsmouth. Currently, Mrs. Steele heads sales while her husband is in charge of personnel.

Data processing is the procedure through which everyday writing and tables of data are retyped into symbolic languages that computers are designed to use. At the present time, SDP has no computer; it only translates written material onto magnetic tape for use in computers elsewhere.

THE EXPANSION scheduled for Juen will change that. SDP will lease a Honeywell 2000 computer and have it installed at the Court Street location. This addition will not only make its present operations more efficient, but will also allow the firm to offer a complete computerized-data service.

In simplified terms, if a company wants a column of numbers added, it can now send them to SDP to be punched onto magnetic tape. The tape is then sent back to the company to be run through a computer. After June of this year SDP will be able to run the tape through its own computer and send the answer back to the company completed.

In conjunction with the new facilities, E. Charles Boehm Jr. has joined the Steeles on the executive level. Formerly a vice president of CoDaSci Inc., Columbus, he will head computer operations and sales.

When the new services are available, Steele Data hopes to interest local firms in computer services which they either could not obtain or could not afford elsewhere. Steele Data Processing offers the only service of this type in rural Southern Ohio, and does very well competing with companies in Columbus, Cincinnati and Dayton. The office here serves clients from New York to St. Louis, the largest ones being Ohio public welfare and Indiana motor vehicle departments.

THE VOLUME of material coming in has been so great that most of SDP's employes have been working 50 or more hours per week since February, and some potential clients still had to be turned down. This is especially significant since it was only last fall that SDP opened its office in Portsmouth.

Mrs. Steele attributes this primarily to her company's reputation for accuracy. In competitive companies "2 per cent error is standard; our errors are 1-10th of 1 per cent. Tapes are checked and rechecked, and according to Mrs. Steele, usually go out with fewer errors on the tape than her keypunchers found on the written source material the clients sent in.

She also says that her keypunchers do not foresake speed in order to achieve this accuracy; the girls average 12,000 keystrokes per hour, which is well above average. Her best girls can punch 19,000 characters an hour on some material — punching better than 5 keys per second.

With the overtime of recent weeks, these girls have been making $165 a week or more, and some can earn a bonus of up to $250 for the peak season. Persons who can accurately type 45 to 50 words per minute are considered good prospects for keypunching.

Car, truck collide at North-Court St.

Police cited George R. Landrum, 54, of Latham, for failure to yield right of way after a car-truck collision at the intersection of Court and North streets just before 10 a.m. Friday.

Officers said Landrum was eastbound on Court and made a left turn into the path of a westbound truck driven by Carson Curry Jr., 27, Asheville. The two vehicles collided in the intersection.

Landrum's wife, Gladys, complained of injuries but was not treated at the time. Damage was moderate.

Pentagon papers trial judge blasts prosecution

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jurors return from a day's recess in the Pentagon papers trial today with a request pending to reopen the defense because the government withheld evidence from the court and the defendants.

U.S. Dist. Court Judge Matt Byrne admonished prosecutors angrily on Thursday and sent the jurors home after the government admitted that it had failed to make available to the defense pre-trial interviews with witnesses who have testified at the trial. The judge had ordered this done months ago.

The defense was supposed to be given the material before cross-examining the witnesses—four employes of the Rand Corp., where defendants Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo worked at the time they copied the secret Pentagon study of U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war.

The judge said a summary of one set of statements showed they would be helpful to Ellsberg's and Russo's defense against charges of espionage, conspiracy and theft.

In a separate development while the jury was absent on Thursday, the government asked Byrne to review another set of documents out of the presence of the defense lawyers. The judge refused to accept the material.

"... I cannot receive this information on an in camera basis because I have no authority to do so," said Byrne. But neither the judge nor the government gave a hint of what the documents concerned, except that they did not relate to any previous orders of the court. This ruled out the chance that it was a report on wiretapping.

Byrne said that if the government planned to give the new material to the defense "they should do so promptly."

Solons eye skin flicks

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Some Texas lawmakers have asked for a private showing of "Deep Throat" and "Last Tango in Paris" so they can see, uh, just how bad they are.

The House Intergovernmental Affairs Committee voted 12 to 1 Thursday night to subpoena the films.

Rep. Billy Williamson, D-Tyler, said the committee should see them and then vote for his bill to allow cities to license theater operators. Licenses could be revoked if X-rated films were shown to persons under 18.

"I'm here to challenge this committee to subpoena some of the current filth that is circulating in our land, that would subvert the morals of our youth," William said.

He said a newsman told him "Deep Throat" was such a film, "and something called 'Tango.'"

Bottomless bars face crackdown

INKSTER, Mich. (AP) — Police have made their first move to crack down on the bottomless go-go bars which Mayor Edward Bivins Jr. says are giving Inkster a reputation as "Sin City."

Three bars in this Detroit suburb have been offering bottomless go-go dancing for about a month, but it wasn't until Thursday that warrants were issued against 12 of the performers.

The women were charged with disorderly conduct under a section of the city's ordinance dealing with persons who "engage in indecent, immoral or obscene conduct in any public or private place."

Waste reported in NATO setup

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The United States and its allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization are wasting more than a billion dollars a year by competing with each other in arms manufactures and by not unifying their armed forces, one member of the alliance says.

Officials at NATO headquarters who reported it refused to say which one of the 15 members made the estimate.

They said a prime example of waste is the competition in anti-tank weapons. The United States, Britain and France are all trying to sell similar models to the other nations.

Deny tax increase considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying a high-ranking administration official was misunderstood when speaking of a possible tax hike, Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz has denied that President Nixon is considering an increase.

Shultz commented on an interview earlier in the week by Chairman Herbert F. Stein of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, who said "we are studying the possibility" of tax increases to slow down the economy.

Interviewed on the National Public Affairs Center for Television Thursday, Shultz said Stein's comments "were misunderstood."

"We are going to propose a program on Monday on behalf of the President ... that will aim at greater equity in the tax system and greater simplicity for the taxpayer in trying to understand that system and fill out his or her tax form," Shultz said, adding:

"But that's a very different thing from any ... proposal for an increase in taxes. There will be no such proposal."

He declined to go into more detail on the upcoming proposals. Meanwhile, Sen. William Proxmire today said if Nixon proposes a tax increase, "I will do my best to kill it."

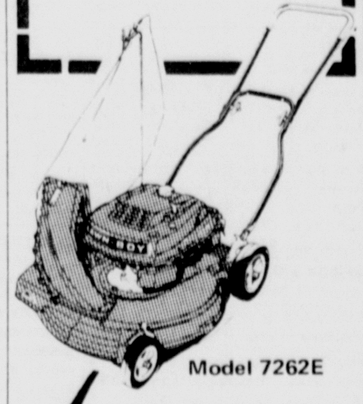

The Wisconsin Democrat, vice chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, noted some administration suggestions such an increase might be in the works as an anti-inflation move.

"It would be a harsh and outrageous act at a time when the administration is wasting billions in unneeded subsidies, excessive military aid spending, foreign military aid to some 46 countries in the world, and for frivolous items like servants for the military brass and limousines for every minor bureaucrat in Washington."

Also Thursday, AFL-CIO President George Meany urged Congress to reject President Nixon's proposal for expanding trade with the Soviet Union by granting the Soviets a most-favored trade status.

"There is no reason to believe that such treatment will lead the U.S.S.R. to make earnest efforts for removing the causes of international tension and promoting equitable and lasting world peace," Meany said in a prepared New York speech at the Congressional Medal of Honor Society's annual Patriot's Award Dinner.

the last stop . . .
. . . . in a successful hog production program!

When those hogs have been farrowed, fattened, and marketed, the only measure of success is PROFIT!

All the pennies saved in reduced feed and labor costs by skilled producers can vanish if the same high level of management is not present at marketing time.

The skilled producer puts an efficient marketing organization to work for him—Heinold Hog Markets.

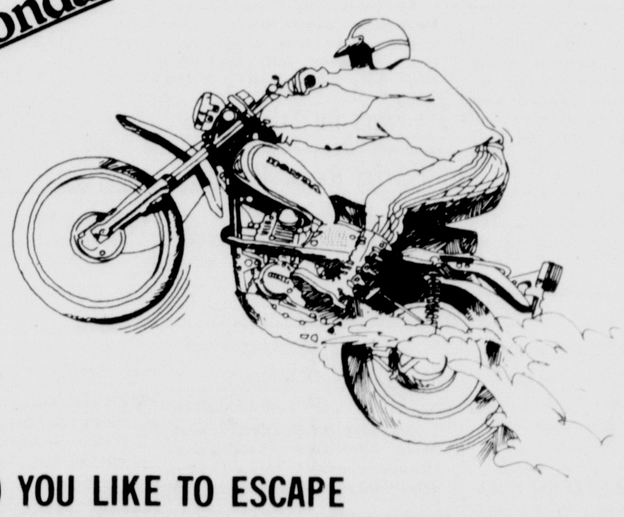

Heinold labors just as hard at marketing as the skilled hog producer does at production. As the world's largest hog marketing organization it has the efficiency, skill, and marketing power to give a producer every penny possible for his hogs.

That's why successful hog production programs end at a Heinold chute.

Test Your Dummy Play

1. You are declarer with the West hand at Four Hearts and North leads the king of clubs. How would you play the hand?

	♠ A763 ♥ AJ98 ♦ 872 ♣ AJ
♠ KJ2 ♥ KQ10753 ♦ K64 ♣ 8	N W E S

2. You are declarer with the West hand at Three Notrump. North leads the six of spades on which South plays the jack. How would you play the hand?

	♠ 842 ♥ KJ ♦ AK963 ♣ A94
♠ KQ7 ♥ A94 ♦ J105 ♣ K1083	N W E S

1. Win the club with the ace, draw trumps, and exit with the jack of clubs, discarding a diamond or a spade on it. North wins with the queen and must hand you the game-going trick whether he leads a spade to your K-J, a diamond to your king, or a club which gives you a ruff and discard.

2. Assuming that North has the spade length, which is certainly reasonable, you can assure the contract 100 per cent by refusing to win the first spade. South cannot injure you by switching to another suit, so let's say he returns a spade.

If North started with four spades, he can do no better than let you win with the queen, in which case you would finesse the jack of diamonds and make three notrump even though the finesse lost and South returned a spade.

If North started with five spades, you are on equally firm ground, and, in fact, you have a good chance to make more than nine tricks. The same is true if North started with six spades.

Whatever form of spade length North has, the duck at trick one destroys him as an effective fighting force. The only way you can miss is if North has five spades to the ace and you allow him to make four of them. By ducking you erase that possibility. Thereafter you can happily allow south to come in with the queen of diamonds, since no real harm can befall you.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Her Pupil Is Hyperkinetic

I am a teacher. An 8-year-old boy in my class is so active that I can truly say he never sits still for a moment.

He is very bright, but his behavior is totally disruptive.

His parents resent the fact that I have suggested medical attention for their boy.

Can anything be done for such an overactive child?

Dear Miss L.:

The dedication and training of teachers often makes them recognize behavior problems that may be overlooked, and even ignored, by parents.

Far too often, parents take it as a personal insult if they are told about unacceptable behavior of their children.

Actually, the teacher is in the best position to see a child who is in contact with other children of his own age in community living.

The kind of extraordinary hyperactivity that you describe is a very special and definite pattern of behavior which may be the result of physical or emotional problems, or a combination of both.

The condition is called "hyperkinesia."

It is strange, and oddly unexplained, that such overactivity occurs ten times more often in boys than it does in girls. It is rarely seen in children below the age of 4.

I refer, of course, to overactivity associated with abnormal emotional instability and irritability. This does not apply to the normally energetic, enthusiastic outgoing behavior of an active young child.

The parents of this boy would do well to understand the validity of your observations. Medical opinions will rule out any physical disease. Psychological studies may locate emotional conflicts.

There are now many excellent drugs which can reduce the overactivity of children, making them better students. More especially, will they be able to function better in social situations.

Why are nose drops prescribed if they cause so much trouble? I actually became addicted to one and could not spend four hours without putting drops in my nose.

Mr. F. E., Ore.

Dear Mr. E.:

The condition you describe is known as the "rebound phenomenon."

Many people who are allergic or who have a highly sensitive mucous membrane lining of the nose will become dependent (rather than "addicted") to nose drops. These people find that more and more drops are needed at more frequent intervals, to open the nasal passages. This cycle must be broken because of the damage that can be done to the lining of the nose.

Cortisone, in carefully prescribed small doses, for a short time, has been effectively used to break the cycle of dependence.

For various medical reasons, not all people are allowed to use cortisone. Under no circumstances should it be taken without a doctor's advice.

Nose drops are effective and are prescribed for short periods of time. Never are they intended to be used indiscriminately or indefinitely, nor in amounts other than prescribed.

Shaul continues housecleaning

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)— Commerce Director Dennis Shaul, buoyed by a vote of confidence from Gov. John Gilligan, Thursday forced the resignation of one aide, fired another and transferred a third.

Shaul said all were involved in questionable conduct concerning the issuing of real estate brokers' and salesmen's licenses. The real estate operation comes under Shaul's jurisdiction.

Shaul said he forced the resignation of J. David Maffeo, assistant secretary to the three-member Real Estate Commission. Maffeo, Shaul said, would have been fired if he had insisted on staying.

Maffeo earlier told Shaul and newsmen that he gave "special" exams to his wife, Betty, and his father, Joseph. He said he was in the next room when they took the written exams.

The private examinations have been abused, Shaul said, under previous administrations. He said they were primarily aimed at the handicapped and blind, but in reality were being given to "almost anybody who came in and said he could not make the regularly-scheduled examination."

Shaul said he had fired Christian Redkey, chief of the investigative section of the Real Estate Division, which is charged with administering the examinations.

He also announced the transfer of Joseph Coyner, chief of testing, but said he had not yet decided where he would be transferred to.

Another Shaul aide, Alexander Martin Jr., counsel to the commission's executive secretary, was transferred from the Real Estate Division to the enforcement section of the Securities Division. It was described as a "lateral transfer."

Shaul, in an afternoon news conference, announced the promotion of Joseph Forch and Veronica Dever to fill the gap created by the resignation, firing and transfer.

Forch will become assistant secretary to the commission and take over the duties of chief of investigation. Miss Dever will become superintendent of enforcement. She had previously been an assistant superintendent.

Shaul said the probe into the procedures surrounding licensing of politically influential persons crossed party lines. He noted that Maffeo, Redkey and former commission secretary Vernon B. McMillen were all Democrats.

McMillen was fired by Shaul several days ago when it became public knowledge that former Gov. James Rhodes received a broker's license four days before leaving office during a 45 minute "oral examination" given to him in the governor's office.

Customarily, McMillen told Shaul in a public hearing, the written broker's exam lasts as long as six hours. He said the test for a salesman's license can last up to three hours and 30 minutes. All regularly-scheduled tests are given in the presence of monitors.

Shaul earlier in the day opened his files of the 164 people who took special examinations since the Gilligan administration went into office.

Among the folders Shaul put on a conference room desk was that of Gerald Wedren, his immediate predecessor in the post. The file showed that Wedren, also a Gilligan appointee, took a broker's exam last November, passing it by a seven-point margin.

Shaul said an investigative commission, which Gilligan said Wednesday he would appoint, would look into the circumstances surrounding Wedren's testing as well as that of Rhodes, some of his key aides, and others that may have taken special tests before or after Gilligan took office.

Shaul, who has been director of commerce for 13 months, said he will declare "null and void" any license held or obtained by a department employe in a special examination since the current administration took office. He said he would order licenses obtained through normal procedures by department employes to be held in escrow until they leave state service.

Shaul, former Akron city councilman, said he had asked Gilligan to have all department heads within state government to report on any state employe who may hold either a salesman's or broker's license.

He said he wanted to know what reason there was for them having such licenses. He said it would be bad for the administration from an image standpoint to have been granting licenses to state employes, specifically those within the Department of Commerce which regulates, among other things, the Real Estate Division.

Students hold U.N. session; find new roles challenging

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — "This is probably the best experience in role-playing I'll ever have. After all, I'm a card-carrying Zionist," said 19-year-old Paula Tobenfeld.

Paula is a freshman at Kent State University who ardently supports the cause of Israel. This week, she's a Soviet delegate attacking Israel at an all-student simulated session of the United Nations.

"For my speech in the Security Council, it was suggested I compare Zionism to Nazism, but I wouldn't go that far," said Paula, who belongs to Masada, a Zionist youth movement.

Paula, who would like to be a diplomat, said: "The most important thing a country or a person can do is to understand what the other fellow is thinking. I don't agree with many policies of the Soviet Union, but this way I can understand why they are doing what they do. I think that is what the U.N. is all about.

More than 1,000 young Americans from 130 colleges and universities have gathered in New York to stage mock debates at the annual National Model United Nations. They meet with U.N. diplomats and officials at foreign missions or U.N. headquarters and hold their simulated sessions at a midtown Manhattan hotel.

Policies of countries are followed faithfully, but "poetic license" and more direct language is permitted than heard at the real United Nations, Security Council President Robert Burstein, 21, of the New York Law College, said.

Tom Chelton, 21, of Indiana State College, Terre Haute, heads tha U.S. General Assembly delegation. He said the U.S. role is one of the most challenging of all.

Man loses bid for $150,000 found as GI

WASHINGTON (AP)—Donald W. Morrison may have found $150,000 while on a patrol in Vietnam in 1968, says a federal claims commissioner, but he isn't entitled to keep it because he was acting as "an agent of the United States."

Commissioner Kenneth R. Harkins recommended Thursday that the U.S. Court of Claims turn down the former soldier's petition to regain the money, his third setback in efforts to lay hands on the cash he found in the mountains of South Vietnam.

Earlier, both the Defense Department and a federal district court judge in Morrison's native Georgia turned down his request for the money.

Morrison contends the money is his because it constitutes a "treasure trove."

When Morrison discovered the money, Harkins said, "he did so as an agent of the United States" and is not a "finder" of the $150,000.

"THE RATS are unbelievable," said City Building Inspector Glenn Tatman in reference to the former Fayette Elevator building on E. Court Street City Councilman Donald E. Wood said he recently chased away three children who were throwing stones into four feet of water which is standing in the basement, lower photo. Wood asked for official city action to require the owner, Walter Driesbach, to either tear down the building or board it up. Tatman, referring to the holes in the floor (shown in the top photo just inside the open door), said a person could easily fall into the water below.

Arnold pleads guilty to embezzlement

J. M. (Mike) Arnold, 112 E. Temple St., entered guilty pleas today in U. S. District Court, Columbus, to two charges of embezzlement, according to the U. S. attorney's office in Columbus.

He was indicted Feb. 28 by a federal grand jury on counts of embezzling $10,500 from the Washington Savings Bank.

Judge Joseph Kinneary ordered a presentence investigation. Sentencing is tentatively scheduled for May 18, and Arnold was released on his own recognizance.

A former city councilman, Arnold was indicted for embezzling $10,000 from the bank in May, 1970, and $500 in May, 1971. He was employed by the bank as a teller at the time of the two incidents. His employment there was terminated about 1½ years ago.

The maximum penalty on a federal embezzling charge of $5,000 fine or 5 years in prison or both.

10 motorized mail routes start Monday

Effective Monday, 10 of the 11 Washington C. H. city mail delivery routes will be motorized, Richard Witherspoon, postmaster, announced Friday.

"In order to do this, we must revamp all of our city routes," Witherspoon said. "Most of our customers will receive their mail at approximately the same time, although some will receive it earlier, and in a few cases the mail will arrive later."

"In the residential areas, the same carrier who delivers your letter mail will also bring any parcel post matter that you may receive," the postmaster added.

Witherspoon said the step is being taken to provide better service, at the same time resulting in a dollar saving to the Postal Service.

The only route which will not be motorized is No. 5 which primarily serves the downtown area.

The cars to be used by postmen are being leased from a Cincinnati firm.

Daylight time begins Sunday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Daylight Saving Time goes into effect at 2 a.m. Sunday. Those who remember will set their clocks ahead one hour.

The conversion applies throughout or in parts of 48 states, with Hawaii and Arizona the last complete holdouts. In Indiana and Michigan, on the border between Central and Eastern time, the situation varies among different counties.

Nixon tours flood area

By BILL O'SHEA
Associated Press Writer

President Nixon makes an aerial inspection today of flooded areas in the Mississippi River valley where about 10,000 persons have been left homeless and damage estimates have climbed to more than $200 million.

Ten persons have lost their lives in the flooding along the Mississippi, Missouri and Illinois rivers and their tributaries in seven states.

In some areas the highest flood-levels in recorded history were expected to worsen after new rains last week fell on top of earlier heavy spring downpours. The Mississippi River at St. Louis reached 42.16 feet overnight and was rising. The previous record of 42 feet was set in 1785.

In Washington, Nixon declared flood-stricken parts of Illinois major disaster areas and moved to make federal aid available.

The help will consist primarily of temporary housing, unemployment assistance, low-interest loans, debirs clearance and repairs to roads, bridges, dikes and levees.

Nixon was to fly over some of the flooded areas en route to a ceremony at Meridian, Miss., honoring Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss.

The crest, or highest flood level, of the Mississippi swept past Hannibal, Mo., during the night, but the saturated levees upriver at Quincy, Ill., remained in serious jeopardy, a spokesman for the U.S. Corps of Army Engineers said.

The Corps of Army Engineers at St. Louis estimated that if the river reaches its expected crest of 43.5 feet there on Saturday $136 million in damages will have been done in Missouri and Illinois alone.

"A few more inches can mean a hell of a lot when you're talking about the Mississippi," a spokesman said.

To the south, the National Weather Service reported no rain expected in Louisiana or Mississippi through Sunday but said there is a chance of showers on Monday or Tuesday.

The Arkansas River continued to fall on Thursday and the forecast called for fair weather after 12 consecutive days of rain and flooding.

The long-term effects of the flooding depend to a large extent on future rainfall. The Southern cotton crop will be dealt a severe blow if the rain does not stop before the mid-May planting season. Cotton prices are already rising.

Rain fell over much of the eastern third of the nation today, and a wintry chill maintained crisp temperatures in the midcontinent.

A flash-flood watch was posted for Georgia and the mountains of the Carolinas. Savannah, Ga., was soaked by more than two inches of rain through Thursday night.

Showers ranged westward into Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee and north across New England.

Cool, dry air sweeping over the Plains dropped temperatures into the 20s in sections of the Dakotas and the 30s as far south as the Texas Panhandle.

Fog covered the California coast, and a few showers dampened Oregon.

Clear skies prevailed from the California coastal ranges across the central and southern Plateau to the central and southern Rockies.

Weather

Rain today and tonight with a chance of showers continuing tomorrow. Lows tonight near 40. Highs tomorrow again near 50.

Man files suit to close down vo-ed schools

UPPER SANDUSKY, Ohio (AP)— Contending the goal of education is "how to live, not how to make a living," E. Dennis Barnes of Upper Sandusky has filed a suit seeking to close down vocational training units in Ohio schools.

Barnes, a member of the city's board of education, claims in his common pleas court action that the units are unconstitutional because the Ohio Constitution authorizes only "common schools."

Barnes said that term is limited to mental training and excludes manual or job training courses.

Named defendants in the suit were state school Superintendent Martin Essex and the four members of the Upper Sandusky Board of Education.

New dimension in Watergate

Magruder quits post

WASHINGTON (AP) — The sudden, unexplained resignation of former Nixon campaign deputy Jeb S. Magruder from the Commerce Department adds a new dimension to the Watergate scandal.

It was the first resignation of any high administration official involved in the widening wiretap affair.

In another development, The Washington Post, The New York Times and New York Daily News quoted sources as saying that Acting FBI Director L. Patrick Gray III destroyed documents belonging to convicted Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt Jr. after being told by presidential aides John Ehrlichman and John W. Dean III that the documents should "never see the light of day."

Ehrlichman issued a statement through the White House press office confirming that at a June 1972 meeting in his White House office Dean gave Gray a sealed envelope containing "some of the contents of Hunt's safe."

"Mr. Gray was told by Mr. Dean that the contents were sensitive materials not in any way related to the Watergate case," said the statement. "I was present but neither then nor at any other time did I give Mr. Gray any request, suggestion or instruction regarding what should be done with the contents."

Dean and Gray could not be reached for comment.

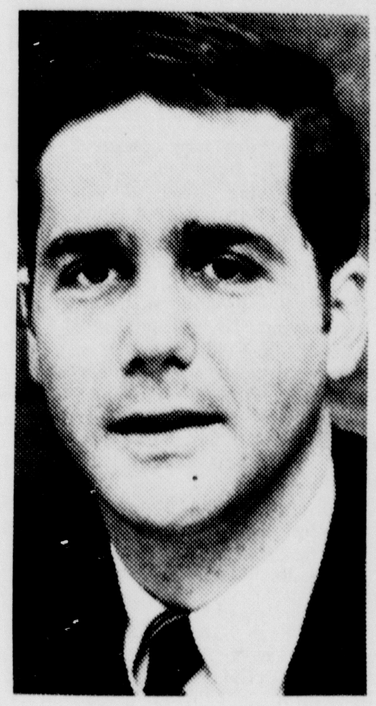

Magruder reportedly had been both an accuser and an accused in the case. He left his $36,000-a-year job as Commerce Department director of policy development without formal notice. His lawyer, James J. Bierbower, was asked late Thursday night for an explanation, and said flatly, "There will be none."

Recent news reports have quoted Magruder as telling federal prosecutors that Mitchell and Dean, the White House counsel, approved and helped plan last summer's wiretapping of Democratic offices. Magruder also reportedly said the pair later arranged payoffs to silence the defendants in the case.

Dean has said publicly he won't be a scapegoat and has vowed privately to implicate others. News reports say Magruder broke down only after Dean made accusations of his own to prosecutors.

In other Watergate developments:

—The Washington Post, quoting reliable sources, said that Dean told President Nixon on March 20 that "to save the presidency" Dean and Nixon's two top aides—H.R. Haldeman and Ehrlichman—would have to disclose all they knew about Watergate and face the possible consequence of going to jail. The Post said Dean told federal prosecutors all he knew on April 6 but Haldeman and Ehrlichman apparently balked.

JEB S. MAGRUDER

Various news reports have said Nixon has asked, or is about to ask, Secretary of State William P. Rogers, former Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird, NATO Ambassador Donald Rumsfeld or former White House lobbyist Bryce Harlow. Harlow says he hasn't been asked. Laird says he isn't available. Sources close to Rogers say he hasn't been asked, either. Rumsfeld couldn't be reached.

—A lawyer representing two presidential aides in the Watergate scandal shuttled Thursday from the White House to the office of federal prosecutor Silbert.

The lawyer, John J. Wilson, has met twice with Nixon himself. Thursday he had first talked to his clients, Haldeman and Ehrlichman, and then visited Silbert's office for roughly half an hour.

He said they discussed the Watergate affair, and that Haldeman and Ehrlichman would appear voluntarily before the grand jury if asked.

—Others who appeared in Silbert's office during the day were Powell Moore, a former spokesman for the Nixon campaign, and Hugh Sloan, the former treasurer.

Viet Reds dampen report of talks by Kissinger, Tho

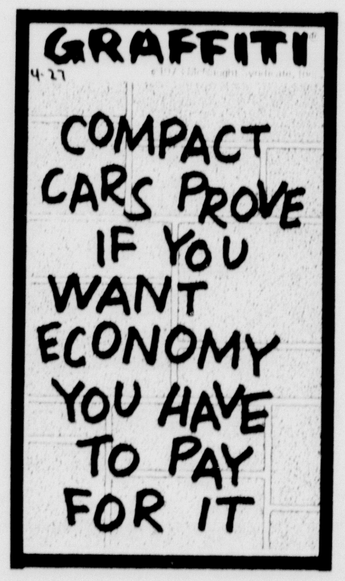

PARIS (AP) — The North Vietnamese Embassy threw cold water today on U.S. talk of a meeting between Henry A. Kissinger and Le Duc Tho, saying it knew nothing about such a meeting to discuss enforcement of the Vietnamese ceasefire.

The embassy issued a statement saying news about such a meeting had been issued unilaterally by the United States.

The North Vietnamese statement was issued as William Sullivan, U.S. deputy assistant secretary of state, and Nguyen Co Thach, Hanoi's deputy foreign minister, began talks on ways to carry out the cease-fire agreement signed in Paris three months ago today.

Those negotiations had been announced simultaneously Wednesday by the United States and North Vietnam. The announcements said nothing about a meeting between President Nixon's national security adviser and the North Vietnamese Politburo member with whom he negotiated the ceasefire agreement, but sources at the White House then said the talks between Sullivan and Thach would be a preliminary to a Kissinger-Tho meeting in mid-May.

The North Vietnamese communique today said: "According to Western news agency dispatches, the White House has announced that there would be a meeting between special counsellor Le Duc Tho and Dr. Kissinger around mid-May 1973. This is a report made unilaterally by the United States. The Embassy of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam does not yet have any information on the subject of this meeting."

The grant, made by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, is for the operation of a summer Head Start program for 120 children.

CANCER CRUSADE PREVIEW — Mrs. Paul D. Lucas (left), a volunteer worker, hands cancer information literature to Mrs. Ernest D. Wilson and in return received a contribution to the fund to fight cancer in this preview of the annual Cancer Crusade here. This scene will be re-enacted many times Sunday when more than 500 volunteers start going from house to house to leave cancer information pamphlets and receive contributions.

500 volunteers to conduct appeal

Cancer Crusade opens Sunday

More than 500 volunteers will launch the annual house-to-house Cancer Crusade here Sunday to raise funds for fighting one of the world's worst killer diseases.

The theme of the Crusade this year is: "We Want To Wipe Out Cancer in Your Lifetime." Behind that there is a lot of hard work on national, state and local levels.

Jim Vess is the Crusade chairman and Paul V. Johnson the co-chairman. Mrs. Mary Alice Graumlich is the executive director of the Fayette County unit of the American Cancer Society. They will direct the Crusade in which volunteers will attempt to contact all of the approximately 8,000 homes in Washington C. H. and the rural area of the county.

CHAIRMAN VESS said: "We'll try to make the 1973 theme come true in two ways. First, we'll ask our friends and neighbors to have annual health checkups, including all - important cancer tests, and then the volunteers will ask the people to fight cancer with whatever they can afford so that the Cancer Society's programs of research, education and service to cancer patients can continue and be expanded.

Unit President Robert E. Minshall said he is well pleased with the plans for this year's Crusade and expressed appreciation of the many hours already given to it by so many volunteers.

Minshall said: "Because of the efforts of these people and the generous contributions by the citizens here, definite progress is being made in the fight against cancer . . . because of this, the whole world is a little closer to the cures for cancers of all types."

MRS. MARION WADDLE, public education chairman of the county unit, explained that the reason so much emphasis is placed on annual checkups is very clear. She pointed out that "today, if not even one new thing is learned from the research laboratories, the physicians have the knowledge that could save 108,000 more cancer patients every year." She added, however, that "early diagnosis and prompt treatment are the only ways to achieve that goal."

Mrs. Byers W. Shaw, chairman of the county unit's service committee, said thousands of American women will die this year because they refuse, or neglect, or forget, or put off having a simple painless Pap test for uterine cancer. "So many forms of cancer are curable now," she said, adding, "That's the hopeful side of the Cancer Crusade . . . that and the marvelous quality of our research scientists."

Eugene Bienz is chairman of the residential Crusade in the city, and Mrs. Virgil Hardman and Mrs. Edwin Thompson are co-chairman of the rural residential Crusade.

Egypt sets war measure for Cairo

CAIRO (AP) — Street lights in this city of six million persons will be dimmed by 25 per cent beginning tonight as part of Egypt's stepped-up preparations for "total confrontation" with Israel.

There was speculation Egypt may time a military attack to coincide with Israel's 25th anniversary celebrations, but according to reports from Tel Aviv, President Anwar Sadat has been warned by Western diplomats in Cairo to be cautious or he will run the risk of an Israeli invasion across the Suez Canal.

Government technical groups also will begin visiting some 4,000 buildings erected since 1968 to insure they have air raid shelters, newspapers reported.

The government has resorted to dimouts in the past to heighten the public's defense consciousness.

Many Cairo windows and headlights remain painted blue from blackouts first ordered in 1969 when Israeli jets ranged unchecked over Egypt.

Actress Irene Ryan dies; 'Granny' on television show

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — To millions of viewers who watched "The Beverly Hillbillies" during its nine-year run on television, diminutive Irene Ryan was the "Granny" who kept her backwoods kin in line with her sometimes-shrill voice.

She once said, "That's how most people recognize me, through my voice. I'd lot rather be known as 'The Body,' but I guess I'll have to be content with what I got."

The veteran actress, who recently made her Broadway debut in "Pippin," died Thursday night at a Santa Monica hospital after suffering a stroke. She was 70.

She was flown here after being stricken on the "Pippin" stage March 10.

Miss Ryan had become a millionaire through savings and investments from "The Beverly Hillbillies," a comedy about a family that struck it rich on oil.

She had endowed a foundation bearing her name with more than $1 million in scholarships for promising students in theater arts. She was scheduled to be present Sunday at this year's presentations at the John F. Kennedy Center for Performing Arts in Washington.

Her career began at age 11 when she sang "Pretty Baby" as loudly as she could in winning $3 in an amateur contest at San Francisco's old Valencia Theater.

With her late first husband, Tim Ryan, the comedy team of "Tim and Irene" toured vaudeville for years, then made it to radio.

Starting in 1962, on "The Beverly Hillbillies" she became known as the forceful "Granny" who liked to puff a pipe, tote a rifle and try to put good sense into Beverly Hills when the television family moved from hillbilly country after striking oil.

Her role in "Pippin" had earned her a Tony nomination and her song from the show, "No Time At All," was a recording hit.

Funeral services are to be held here next Tuesday.

Capacity crowd enjoys Boys' Choir concert

A capacity audience applauded the "Springtime in Song" concert by the Fayette County Boys Choir Wednesday night in the Sunnyside School auditorium. Approximately 200 tickets had been sold in advance and that is just about the seating capacity of the auditorium.

The program was opened by the 20-voice choir, which was joined by the audience, singing "America."

The choir, under the direction of Mrs. Robert E. Willis, the founder, sang such numbers as "Bless this House," "Beautiful Ohio," "Home on the Range,", the "Marine Hymn," and the spiritual, "Lonesome Valley."

The program also included solos by Jeff Fannon, "Every Fellow Needs a Girl" and "The Lord's Prayer," and Greg Sanderson, "The Palms"; a reading, "I Am an American," by Don Eyre, and a quartet composed of Jeff Fannin, Jeff Overly, Greg Sanderson and Tim Dunlap. The chorus sang "Where in the World but in America" for the finale.

Five alumni of the choir at the concert were introduced. Two of them, Gary Brown and Colin Leeth, were ushers.

Proceeds from the concert will be added to the fund for the choir's trip to Charlottsville, Va. The group will leave by chartered bus May 4.

John Huffman was the choir accompanist, Scott Lanum was in charge of the stage and lighting effects, and Garrell Leasure is the trip manager.

Russia shifts top members of Politburo

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Communist party fired two members of its ruling Politburo today and promoted three men, including Defense Minister Andrei A. Grechko and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, to the Kremlin's highest body, Tass reported.

The Politburo is the party's most powerful policy-making body. Politburo members Pyotr Shelest and Gennady I. Voronov were removed from the Politburo at the final day of a two-day meeting here of the Communist party's Central Committee.

The third new member of the Politburo is Yuri V. Andropov, the chief of the Soviet secret police, known by its Russian initials as the KGB.

The personnel changes increased the Politburo to 16 men.

Marshal Grechko, defense minister since 1967, is the first military man to sit on the Politburo since Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov served a brief six months in 1957.

Both Gromyko and Grechko are considered strong supporters of General Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Andropov's new post evidently elevates the KGB organization back into the inner sanctum of the Kremlin. The KGB chief's political allegiances are unclear, but he is not known as a Brezhnev critic.

Judge orders remap suit dismissal

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Reacting to a federal judge's order, Republicans today were to ask dismissal of their Ohio Supreme Court suit challenging the 1971 apportionment of state legislative districts.

Atty. John McElroy said federal Judge Frank J. Battisti had ordered the suit filed in the Ohio Supreme Court dismissed by court closing time today.

McElroy filed the lawsuit March 30, in the name of Lloyd George Kerns of Richwood, a former state representative.

It asked that the Democratic-drafted reapportionment plan be declared null and void and that the court order new elections this year for the 99 House and 33 Senate district.

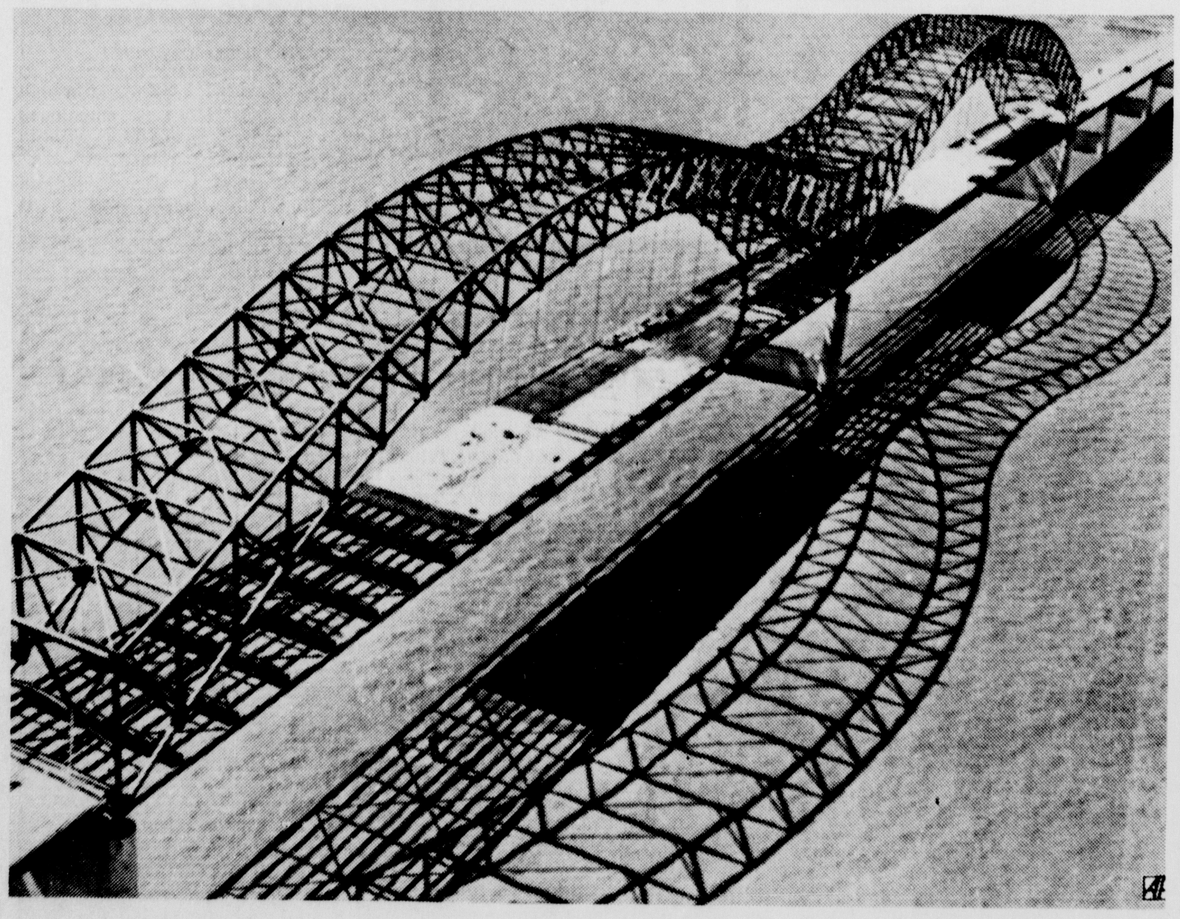

McElroy said he was getting out of the litigation "because it is too wearing upon me." But he said he would first set up the legal groundwork for an appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court and the Sixth District Court of Appeals in Cincinnati.

McElroy served as an aide to former Republican Gov. James A. Rhodes.

Defendants in the court action were the five members of the State Apportionment Board which drew the legislative district boundaries now in effect.

They are Gov. John J. Gilligan, Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, Sen. Anthony O. Celabrese, D-22 Cleveland, all Democrats, and Secretary of State Ted W. Brown and former Rep. Robert A. Manning of Akron, both Republicans.

In the Kerns' petition, McElroy said the five-member board followed the one-man, one vote edict of the U. S. Supreme Court when it adopted the plan Dec. 20, 1971, but violated the Ohio Constitution by not following political boundaries.

BRIDGE OF SHADOWS — Work is under way on the decking of a new $50 million Mississippi River bridge at Memphis, Tenn. The bridge is scheduled to be opened to traffic late this year. Meanwhile, a bright spring sun cooperated to cast the bridge's shadow on the river, showing off the giant "M" of the super-structure.

The rain and cloudiness in Ohio Friday was part of a storm system that moved out of Mississippi and into the Carolinas during the night.

At dawn Friday, rain fell over all but the extreme northwestern counties. Measurable rain was confined to the Chesapeake and Marietta areas along the Ohio River. Both areas reported less than a half inch.

Rain from the storm will persist over the eastern counties Friday night, while the western section will have scatteree showers. On Saturday rain is expected to continue only in the eastern counties.

Colder air will push into Ohio as the storm moves up the East Coast. Lows Friday night will be from the mid 30s to the 40s. Higts on Saturday will be from 45 to 55.

Meanwhile, the northeast and north winds continue along the Lake Erie shoreline, causing more erosion and localized flooding.

The northeast winds were reported from 15 to 25 knots east of Lorain, raising the water levels in the western end of the lake. West of Lorain, winds were also ranging from 15 to 25 knots.

The winds were expected to increase Friday and shift more to the northwest Friday night.

A chance of showers, mainly Monday and Tuesday. Highs from the upper 40s to upper 50s Sunday and from the mid 50s to mid 60s Tuesday. Lows in the 40s.

'Extra' life for youth proves costly

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — At 21, Bob Vetter has outlived his life expectancy and can barely afford to pay for the treatments that are keeping him alive.

Suffering from cystic fibrosis, Vetter is too old to qualify for help from the Florida Bureau of Crippled Children. And when he can work, he makes too much money to qualify for welfare.

"I'm 21, what am I supposed to do, sit back and die?" he asks.

When Vetter is feeling well, he can work to pay the $225 a month for pills he needs to keep his digestive system and lungs functioning. But when he is so sick that he has to be admitted to All Children's Hospital here, there is no way he can pay his bills.

A hereditary, non-contagious disease, cystic fibrosis affects the respiratory system and pancreas, preventing the body from digesting food properly or fighting infection.

Most cystic fibrosis patients die by the time they reach adolescence and few live long enough to finish high school. Vetter is one of only a handful at the hospital who have lived beyond their teens, a hospital spokesman says.

Stock list plummets

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock market prices plummeted today and analysts attributed the slump to investor concern over inflation and rising interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials had fallen 8.58 points to 929.18 at 11:30 a.m. Declines held a 3-2 edge over advances in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The market had advanced Thursday and the Dow rose more than 7 points after Washington announced President Nixon would meet with his top economic advisers over the weekend. Brokers said the rally evaporated after government figures indicated the meeting was not expected to produce any concrete results.

Saxbe blasts pollution law

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — U.S. Sen. William Saxbe, R-Ohio, today urged relaxation of anti-pollution laws to avoid a worsening of the energy crisis.

"Unless we move quickly to develop new energy reserves and lift some of these ridiculous pollution restrictions, the gasoline shortage will be just the tip of the iceberg," Saxbe told the Franklin County Forum, in prepared remarks.

"We're also going to have factory shut-downs and serious electrical brownouts which will effect a lot of jobs," he added.

Johnson to quit as JA director

Burdette Johnson, who has been director of the Junior Achievement Center here for the last two years, told the board of directors at a luncheon meeting Thursday in the Terrace Lounge that he will step out at the end of this school year when the four JA companies are dissolved.

Officers and directors for the 1973-74 year will be elected at the May 24 meeting. The new board then will seek another Center director. The director's job is only parttime and carries a nominal salary.

Much of the discussion at the meeting, which was conducted by President Chester Maple, an Armco industrial engineer, revolved about ways to interest more students in the program which is open to both boys and girls in Washington C.H. and Miami Trace high schools.

Approximately 80 students have been learning the fundamentals of business, from manufacturing to sales, in the four Junior Achievement companies here this year.

Watergate shadow darkens job vacancies

By GAYLORD SHAW
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Watergate scandal, its impact rippling through vast reaches of the government, is cited by officials sources as one reason for the White House's inability to fill nearly 50 top-level federal jobs.

Sources contacted in an Associated Press survey also reported instances of paperwork piling up and employe morale sagging because of Watergate, because of President Nixon's second-term reorganization plan, or the lame-duck aspect of his administration.

White House spokesmen reject suggestions that Watergate is to blame for the lag in rounding out Nixon's second-term team or that it has slowed the bureaucratic processes.

"The processes of government are going on ... the work of government is being done," said White House Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler.

But other sources report a near-paralysis has set in at some policy-making levels in the 10 days since Nixon announced he had launched a personal investigation of the Watergate case after major but still undisclosed developments came to his attention.

The AP survey stretching into widespread sections of the federal establishment also found:

—A White House breakdown shows 26 sub-Cabinet posts remain unfilled three months after Nixon began his second term and launched his reorganization plan. In the upper levels of some departments, the vacancy rate exceeds 25 per cent.

—Ambassadors are yet to be named for 23 countries, a vacancy rate of 18 per cent in these top diplomatic posts. 7

—Latest statistics indicate more than 400 vacancies in lower-and middle-level "Schedule C" government jobs, meaning that about 30 per cent of these jobs, filled by political appointment, are empty.

—Reports mandated by the President or Congress are long overdue in some cases. At the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, one source familiar with the lagging bureaucratic pace said "people are waiting for new bosses to get new directions."

—Low morale is cited virtually everywhere in government. "You'd be surprised how Watergate has affected morale," said an Agriculture Department source. "The trauma has really set in," added a Social Security Administration source.

—At the White House, some staffers have noted a sudden slowing in their usually hectic work pace. One Executive Office Building secretary said that for the first time in years she's been able to go home before dark because "nothing is coming in from the departments."

The President's own work pace has increased, however.

He's been spending "a great deal of time" on the Watergate matter, Ziegler said, "getting in very early and staying late at night."

When asked Thursday about the large number of sub-Cabinet and ambassadorial vacancies, Ziegler responded: "I don't have the answer to why that is the case ...."

Caspar Weinberger, Nixon's new secretary of health, education and welfare, cited another reason in a recent conversation with newsmen. The biggest problem, he said, is that the wives of potential government executives don't want to uproot their families and move to Washington.

But another administration official agreed "there is a certain amount of truth" to suggestions that the Watergate scandal has made some people reluctant to join the administration.

The White House compilation shows that 12.7 per cent of the 205 positions it ranks as "sub-Cabinet" are currently vacant. But at some departments, more than one-fourth of these positions are empty.

Cincy skyscraper plans abandoned

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP)— Plans for a $40-$50 million skyscraper proposed for downtown Cincinnati appear to be abandoned.

The Cincinnati Enquirer reported today there was only an outside chance the building would be built.

George C. Eyrich, attorney for Wiggin's Restaurant, said Unit, Inc., which was planning the structure, had failed to renew its option on property adjoining Wiggins.

The 50-story, quarter-block project was to be built at the site of the Albee Theater.

Opinion And Comment

Poor foreign policy reports

The law requires that the executive branch provide Congress with a wide range of information on foreign policy and its implementation. The congressional committees most directly concerned with this have just released a report, made after a two-year study, showing that much of the information received is both inadequate and slow in coming.

These strictures apply in particular to United States military aid to other countries. Often, it seems, data on military aid is so vague and distorted as to be incomprehensible or even deceptive.

This is a matter of great importance to the national welfare. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee, which jointly ordered the study, cannot formulate sound judgments without good information. If the information provided them is too little and too late, failing accurately to describe the true state of affairs, the legislative process with regard to foreign policy may be seriously hampered.

The report's adverse conclusions are supported by case histories. We are told, for example, that a quarterly report on U.S. spending in Laos omitted the cost of air combat operations and the transfer of excess equipment. We learn that a similar report as to Cambodia said merely that the purpose of 53 million dollars' worth of military equipment, supplies and training was to "upgrade the capabilities of the armed forces of the Khmer Republic." That was, to put it as mildly as possible, not of much help to members of Congress seeking to discover the extent of our government's involvement in Cambodia.

At another point it is observed that weapons turned over to allies by withdrawing U.S. forces were not included in reports on compliance with the congressionally imposed 2.5-billion-dollar ceiling on military aid to Indochina. As to this the report rather moderately notes that it "makes it difficult to determine if U.S. assistance to its allies is being used by them to support the governments of Cambodia and Laos."

Numerous other examples of shortcomings are cited. All in all, one gets a picture of inadequate and misleading reports on foreign policy implementation. A decided improvement in the reporting process should be demanded by Congress.

THESE DAYS . . . by John Chamberlain

Who's entitled to become an M.D.?

As a columnist who draws his share of the mail, I have noticed that two particular topics provoke a particularly heavy correspondence. One is education; the other is medicine. Or perhaps it is only one topic, for it is medical education that sends people to their typewriters and inkwells.

Not too long ago I wrote a column about the difficulty of getting into American medical schools. Albert Schrager, who runs the Alliance for Franco-American Graduate Studies, Inc., at 527 Madison Ave. in New York City, had been complaining that, out of 37,000 applicants, only 13,570 managed to gain acceptance to U.S. medical schools in 1972. In despair, a few hundred Americans with a driving desire to become physicians seek to go abroad each year for medical training.

Mr. Schrager is troubled by the fact that students have had a bad dropout record in foreign universities, owing mainly to language troubles and general cultural shock. One mission of his organization is to see to it that students entering medical schools in France and Italy can meet the language requirements before embarking on their educations.

Mr. Schrager, in conversation, was bitter over the inability of Americans to obtain information about switching to U.S. schools after two years of academic work abroad. He blamed the U.S. medical organizations, including the American Medical Association, for cultivating attitudes that limit entry to a profession which, in the light of the fees charged, can hardly be said to be overcrowded.

THE COLUMN about Mr. Schrager touched some very sensitive nerves. I am still forwarding letters to him from students who have, as they insist, "all the standard requirements for medical school except for grade-point average." Beyond this there are the letters from doctors.

Some are angry with me for saying there is a shortage of doctors in the U.S. Others can't see how a "libertarian," which I most certainly am, can ask physicians to get behind a movement to enlist government in a crusade to start more medical schools. (My answer to this is that free-market theory doesn't apply to a field in which state licensing denies the principle of free entry.)

Other correspondents, including Marvin Edwards, the editor of Private Practice: Journal of the Congress of County Medical Societies, admit that it is tragic that there are not enough facilities to train more prospective doctors (Mr. Edwards says "it is ridiculous to have to turn away B students, even some A students, at times"). But these correspondents absolve the American Medical Association.

Dr. Lee Sataline, who teaches clinical medicine at the University of Connecticut, says "the Association of American Medical Colleges is perhaps more at fault in this scandalous mess than the AMA." Mr. Edwards, who denies that it is "part of the AMA's function to build medical schools," says the organization "has been very generous in providing student scholarships and in encouraging the profession . . . to contribute to the medical schools."

And the AMA's Robert Root makes the "little known point" that, immediately after World War II, "the AMA suggested continuation of the wartime acceleration program of training doctors." If this had happened, we would have had 55,000 more doctors now. Mr. Root adds that the "basic problem" today "is one of distribution and over-specialization and not necessarily production of sheer numbers."

I GATHER from the spate of mail that I may have wronged the American Medical Association, but that a problem nonetheless does exist. If there is "over-specialization," it means we need more general practitioners, particularly in ghetto and rural areas.

As for those medical students who go abroad for their education and then fail to pass the necessary qualifying examination after returning home, Dr. Sataline has some poignant words. Talking with students at Bologna University in Italy, Dr. Sataline noted their "resentment and frustration" with authorities in the U.S. who, so they felt, had "overlooked their ability or motivation" and had "forsaken them as second-class citizens and students."

Since the Bologna courses "are basically didactic and heavily laden with theory," there is a "lack of correlation of the material stressed in Italian as compared to the American texts."

It follows that there are failures in the examinations on which U.S. licensing depends. The foreign-trained student often does better the second time around after he has reviewed material in American books.

A WORD EDGEWISE . . . by John P. Roche

As the King wills it

Many monarchs have discovered in their declining years that when they pushed the buttons, nobody came to learn the royal will. Or if they did come, it was no longer on the dead run, but casually.

Meanwhile, somewhere else in the palace the retainers were ingratiating themselves with the crown prince. As one Roman commentator, Victorus Or, put it, " a setting sun throws little heat." Monarchic responses varied: some crown princes were executed for not exercising necessary patience, others were exiled.

But the monarchic principle left little room for maneuver: there was an automatic heir. If a king had three sons, he couldn't play them off against each other and thus retain decisive power — the oldest boy was it.

In an interesting fashion I think we are witnessing President Nixon's game plan for keeping himself out of the monarch's dilemma. Since he cannot constitutionally run again for President, the natural instincts of the federal bureaucracy from Cabinet secretaries down to clerk-typists would lead them to chum up with the heir apparent. On the other hand, nobody wants to get deeply involved with the Pretender to the throne. So in practical terms what you have to figure out is who is really in line for the crown.

THE IMMEDIATE response at this stage would be Vice President Spiro Agnew, who has been a good soldier, has a strong conservative base in the Republican Party, and is a man of considerable talent. (Before you write Agnew off, recall that the President supplied the speech-writers who gave the Vice President his polysyllabic reputation and then see a rerun of a TV "confrontation" he had with a group of radical students in which he calmly and rationally demolished them).

"Yes," the prudent, upwardly mobile bureaucrat would normally say to himself, "I must get close to Agnew."

Then suddenly a cold breeze comes in from the Southwest, Johny Connally by name. Connally, who is certainly one of the ablest men in American politics, comes on like gang-busters. And it seems as though every time the President gets in front of a news camera, he is explaining to the world in general what a great man Connally is.

In the background is the story, which I have every reason to believe is true, that Nixon did offer the Vice Presidential nomination to Connally last year, but after the shooting of George Wallace, Mrs. Connally (who understabnly has never forgotten those fearful minutes in Dallas in November, 1963) persuaded her husband not to accept.

Connally could easily become a Republican and, with Mr. Nixon's support, go for the big one. The political resources of a retiring President have, I think, been grossly underestimated. He certainly couldn't hand it to Connally on a platter, but he can call in a lot of due bills.

Moreover, if Connally chose to take on Agnew, there would be some spectacular primaries and the Texan is a superb campaigner.

FINALLY, just to make life interesting, Mr. Nixon recently gave his old antagonist, Nelson Rockefeller, a friendly pat, encouraging the New York governor in the latter's zany effort to glue together a coalition of Republicans and Liberals to elect Robert Wagner again as mayor of New York City.

This leaves our prudent, upwardly mobile bureaucrat in a bind. If he goes to Agnew and Connally gets the nod, he will have to find a foundation job. On the other hand, premature commitment to Connally is equally dangerous.

And what about Nelson? There is plenty of life in that old pol.

Maybe the best thing to do is stick with the king, at least until he flashes the signal. As an experienced Nixon-watcher, I would not anticipate any signal for another three years: he is not going to suffer the indignity of pushing a button and having no one come.

"THE DECREASE IN VIOLENT CRIME. IS IT IN THE PENITENTIARIES OR IN THE STREETS."

Hal Boyle . . . Railroading in Australia

By GORDON TAIT
(Subbing for Hal Boyle)

MUNDABRILLA, Australia (AP) — Mundabrilla is a collection of cottages occupied by maintenance men for Australia's transcontinental railway. It's 775 miles east of Perth and 1,687 miles west of Sydney—the two cities that a train called the Indian-Pacific links in a trip that takes the best part of three days and three nights.

The train is air-conditioned and has a club car, dining car, single and twin roomettes, showers and easy chairs. Most of the time it's booked months in advance.

The Indian-Pacific is so named because it is a link between those two oceans.

Out from Mundabrilla, going east, the stunted mulga and mallee trees become fewer as the train rolls toward the Nullarbor plain at a steady 60 miles an hour.

Nullarbor is Latin for "not any trees" and the rail track runs for 420 miles across this limestone plain with never a tree in sight—perfectly flat with only saltbush or spinifex grass as far as one can see.

There's no town in this area, only occasional groupings of railroad workers' cottages and places which watered the locomotives before diesel-electrics took over from steam.

The express stops at few of these settlements. They are served by the affectionately named Tea and Sugar, a train that includes clothing and grocery stores, a butcher, correspondence course teachers for the children, a nurse, and at times a doctor and a dentist.

The trans-Australia railroad is single track much of the 2,461 miles, but there are sidetracks for the Indian-Pacific to slip past freight trains a mile long.

The meals in the dining car, of tourist ship standard, are included in the price of the ticket, and as on ships people quickly become friendly.

The one-way fare of $151.87 first class, $115.44 economy compares with the air fare of $220.24 first or $184.32 economy.

Running of the Indian-Pacific became possible in 1970 with the completion of standard gauge tracks from Perth to Fremantle, and on the "missing link" between Port Pirie in south Australia and Broken Hill in western New South Wales. There used to be different gauges.

People talk of the days 20 years ago, when rail travel across the Nullarbor desert was in stifling hot steam trains with no air-conditioning. In those days they handed out big brown paper bags in which to put your clothes at night to protect them from the dust.

Dear Abby:

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Leave children with trustworthy people

DEAR ABBY: I am divorced with an 8-month-old son, Timmy. Last weekend my boy friend invited me to go to Las Vegas with him, so I left Timmy with a friend I'll call Carol. Carol has no children of her own, but she has practically raised her younger brothers and sisters so I thought my baby would be in good hands.

When I came home and went to pick up Timmy, I was shocked and heartsick. He was all bruised and black and blue. I asked Carol what happened to him, and she said he fell off a chair. Abby, he can hardly sit up, and what would an 8-month-old child be doing on a chair? He looked as if he had been beaten.

I took Timmy home, and now he cries all the time and seems so weak and unhappy. What should I do? Carol won't admit to having beaten him, if that's what she did. I'm so nervous and upset and have no one to talk to. Help me.

YOUNG MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: Take the baby to a pediatrician for a thorough examination to determine whether he has suffered internal injuries. You could file charges against Carol for abusing your child, but you would have to prove it, which would be virtually impossible. Next time, leave your baby with one you are sure you can trust.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for six years and have two children. My problem is a husband who never likes to go out, and I do.

Well, one evening my husband's brother came over with his wife. The brother wanted to go out, but his wife didn't. The wife herself suggested that HE take me. My husband told me to go ahead, so I went. I hadn't been out in such a long time I jumped at the chance. We got home around midnight.

I asked a couple of my friends what they thought of this and one said, "You're lucky to have such an understanding husband."

Another said, "Any man who lets his wife go out with another man can't love her. He must be seeing another woman."

What is your opinion? And do you see anything wrong with what I did?

BEWILDERED

DEAR BEE: I'd agree with the first friend. (P S. An occasional night out with your brother in law is all right, but don't make a habit of it.)

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago I had a child out of wedlock. Because I was pregnant, unable to work, and unmarried, I filed for public aid. After the baby came I was advised to file a paternity suit against Roy, the baby's father. Roy admitted paternity, and the court ordered him to pay me child support every month, which he does.

Roy is marrying a girl who lives about 50 miles away. He says his fiancee knows nothing about the child and he has no intentions of telling her. I think he should. The child carries Roy's last name, and if anything should happen to me, he would have to take the child. Roy is 30 years old, makes a very good living, and this will be his first marriage.

Would I be out of line to let Roy's fiancee know about our child? If I were in her place, I'd want someone to tell me!

CONSIDERING IT

DEAR CONSIDERING: Tell Roy he is unrealistic, unfair, and kidding himself if he thinks he can keep this illegitimate child a secret from his wife forever. I would not tell the girl, but I would advise you to urge Roy to before the wedding.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "FED UP IN ASHLAND: If you are "fed up" with people who always drag their kids along to adult parties, don't invite people who always drag their kids along to adult parties.

Churches mostly silent on state lotteries

NEW YORK (AP) — The United States, much of which in the past sponsored gambling officially and then outlawed it, is reviving the practice again in many places.

A "gambling explosion" is on, says the Rev. Dr. Paul M. Minus Jr., of Delaware, Ohio, a professor of church history.

Although the churches generally have remained silent on the matter in recent times, he says they should take up the ethical issues involved in the "country's drift toward the questionable values of a gambling culture."

The particular target of his criticisms, made in the ecumenical weekly, Christian Century, is the spreading pattern of state-run lotteries, legalized in eight states in the last nine years.

Similar steps are being considered in 10 other states. At least 10 states also are thinking of following New York City's lead into the business of operating off-track betting parlors on horse races.

Although most Protestant churches, particularly Methodists and Baptists, traditionally have opposed gambling and hotly challenged widespread moves 18 years ago legalizing bingo games, there has been scant religious reaction to the present trend.

The current moves for state lotteries and other gambling activitias are being pressed as a means of raising needed additional revenue without intensifying the upward spiral of already painfully high taxes.

While Roman Catholicism does not consider gambling sinful in itself, many of its leaders lately have discouraged bingo as a means of fund-raising, but have had little to say about the spread of state gambling operations.

Dr. Minus, who teaches at Ohio's Methodist Theological School, says that for the churches to ignore the expanding gambling pattern is to deny their responsibility to the poor.

He says that while state lotteries attract about the same proportion of participants of each economic stratum, from high-income people to the impoverished, it is the poor who are victimized.

Dr. Minus contends that "in spite of aggressive merchandising, state lotteries have not netted as much revenue" as predicted — usually only a fraction of a per cent of the state budget. Nor, he adds, have they crippled operations of illegal gambling syndicates.

A state lottery was instituted by New Hampshire in 1964, and since has been authorized in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Michigan and Maryland, with others considering it.

The current trend, however, is not the first time states have used lotteries. Between 1790 and 1870, according to Harvard University historian John S. Ezell, 24 of the then 36 states sponsored lotteries to raise money.

BIBLE QUIZ

Once some remarks were made about hidden books of the Bible. It was a lulu. Kept some people actually looking so hard for facts and studying for the revelation they were in a jam, especially since the books were not capitalized, but the truth finally struck numbers of our readers. To others it was a real job. We want it to be a most fascinating few minutes for you. Yes, there will be some that are easy to spot. Others may require judges to determine. We must also admit, it usually takes a minute to find one and there will be loud lamentations when you see how simple it is. One little lady says she brews coffee while she puzzles her brains.

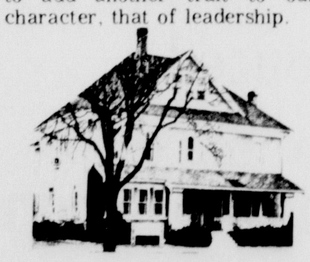

In the paragraph above there are fifteen books of the Bible. Find them!

BY: NED KINZER

When we were infants and toddlers we had but few traits to our character. There, of course, was love and happiness, but mostly, there was confusion. As we grew older, we developed the trait of sorting out this confusion, with understanding, but we also added to our supply of characteristics that of fear, and nothing can be more threatening to one's character than fear. With reasoning, understanding and knowledge, however, fear loses its black visage and becomes just another obstacle which we must hurdle. When arriving at adulthood, we should then be capable of mastering the art of loyalty, trustworthiness and reliability, and if these have been mastered, we might then be able to add another trait to our character, that of leadership.

British hairdresser says customer is always right

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In England the beauty customer is always right, hear, hear.

In fact a hairdresser cannot get her diploma unless she understands the psychology of her relationship with the client. So says pretty Sally Ann Welch 22, of Southampton, England, who recently won the Student of the Year award in competition with 5,000 qualified girls from the United Kingdom.

Sally was in the United States participating in the International Beauty Show in New York as one of her prizes. She was the guest of Roux. She had also received awards from all the hairdressing firms in the United Kingdom.

The House of Parliament now has a law with stringent requirements for hairdressers who must attend a technical school for three years or serve a five-year apprenticeship with school training.

"And the tests are pretty rigid," Sally observed. "First you must write essays. For example, how would you cut the hair of a little child . . or how would you respond to a middle-age woman who might want her hair colored black."

As for styles and shapes, one must be extremely tactful, she insists. Whereas you might say "perhaps you would like to make your face look a bit fuller by pulling your hair out at the side," you wouldn't say "your hair is too high for your long face."

Although in England the Hairdressing Council has the task of improving the course of training, arranging written examinations and the final oral quiz for the eight finalists in the United Kingdom, the judging by a prestigious panel is based on reception, inspection, discussion, action and courtesy (toward clients).

Even before Sally got to that stage, she had earned a diploma from the three-year Portsmouth Technical College where she studied biology, physics and French in addition to the science of hair. And she plans to study for another year so that she can teach.

The English make a big thing of the award she received — it really inflates your ego, said the pretty bride of nine weeks. At a reception attended by members of parliament and the Greater London Council, Sally was presented her trophy — in the shape of a curl of hair — by Sir Cyril English, Director General of the Guilds of London Institute.

Hair styles worn by young English girls are similar to those now being worn by some in America, Sally remarked. Over there the short urchin cut and the page boy called the "Isadora" is very popular with girls who have cut their hair. And some young girls are wearing wigs. But she almost didn't get a chance to size up the situation. Her chaperone, Beverly Ritzen, 24, an executive with the Hair Dressing Council, had been instructed "to lock Sally in her room every night at six o'clock." New York was said to be that dangerous. But they soon were told that such dangers existed only in certain areas, so they ventured outdoors.

In her hair science courses Sally learned to cut the hair of men, a slightly different technique, she says.

She had been looking forward to practicing her arts more with her bridegroom after their marriage, but he is shears-shy, she discovered.

Virginia Circle topic 'Love'

'Love' was the topic when members of the Virginia Circle of the Jeffersonville United Methodist Church met in the home of Mrs. Alva Streitenberger.

Mrs. Dorothy Groves, circle leader, read an article "Love Yourself First," by William Alberts. "Love Your Neighbor as Yourself" means respecting and valuing the same humanity in every person that is in us," she said. She closed with the poem, "Where There is Love" by Helen Steiner Rice. "Flowers leave their fragrance on the hand that bestows them," she said.

Members were thanked for their donations for the Blood Bank. A dessert course was served to 10 members. A social hour followed.

TV Viewing

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Most television announcers got where they are today with perfect diction and deep voices. Wolfman Jack, on the other hand, did it with the taped howls of wolves.

The familiar howls don't usually accompany him in his chores as the regular announcer on the "Midnight Special" pop music show that commences each Saturday at 1 a.m. on NBC-TV.

But they're always heard on his daily rock radio show, which he tapes at his home in Beverly Hills, Calif., and syndicates so slightly more than 1,400 stations in the U.S.

Wolfman probably is totally unknown to older folks. But he's a legend to millions of teen-age listeners and to, say, anyone who still can recite the complete lyrics of "Blue Suede Shoes."

He's mild in person and wild on the air. His delivery is a rapid-fire growl, punctuated now and then by the loud, mournful "OWOOOO" that has been his trademark since 1959.

That was the year the Brooklyn-born disc jockey hit it big with his show from station XERF in Del Rio, Tex., near the Mexican border. It sounds like an unlikely place to become a star.

But the station's transmitter, located across the border in Ciudad Acuna, pumped out 250,000 watts. You could hear Wolfman's howls late at night as far north as Las Vegas and then some.

Wolfman, a stocky man in his late 30s, has been going strong ever since. He was in town this week to discuss a record album, but took time to recount how he got in the howling business.

It all stemmed, he said, from disc jockeys here and in Buffalo who howled or barked on occasion.

"I more or less got the whole thing from them, and that's where the Wolfman Jack name came from," said Wolfman, who has a greying goatee, hates wearing coats and goes about in cowboy boots.

"At midnight, I'd come on with the wolves howling and the down-home blues sound," he said, grinning and giving a quick sample: "This is Wolfman Jack down here with the donkeys gone get you some Soul, man!"

He stayed with his tried-and-tested howls throughout the late 1960s, when many radio stations were doing what he calls "sterilized radio" — de-emphasizing on-air personalities and emphasizing carefully programmed music selections picked out by a consultant.

Wolfman, whose aides insist his real name is Bob Smith, moved to Los Angeles in 1966. He taped his shows there, although they were booked north by a 50,000-watt station, still with his wolf howls, and began syndicating his show, picking up a swarm of new fans in addition to those he'd had right from the XERF days.

He went from underground fame to that of the network variety when tapped to announce on NBC's "Midnight Special" shows.

"They wanted somebody on the show who wasn't a straight announcer, someone who could do different things to give the show the kind of rock image they wanted," he said.

"So they came to me and asked me to do what I do on the radio show. So far, it's worked pretty good."

Wolfman, who is married and has two kids, lives quietly and conventionally, despite his howling success in radio. What music does he like when relaxing from work?

"I really don't listen to music when I'm not on the air," he said. "I listen to it, like 10 hours a day and it's my trade, my profession. You know — a butcher doesn't go home and cut meat.

"I usually like to go home and hear silence. I like to meditate a little bit because I hear sounds all day long."

Hawaiian quake hurts 8 persons; damage moderate

HILO, Hawaii (AP) — An earthquake which shook the Hawaiian island chain did moderate damage to structures in Hilo, the state's second largest city. Police said eight persons were injured, but no deaths were reported.

The tremor struck Thursday with its epicenter located a dozen miles north of Hilo—a sea coast town of 26,000 persons—at a depth of about 25 miles, said Bob Shanks, chief of the state civil defense agency in Honolulu.

"Had it been under Hilo, there would have been greater damage, and probably some loss of life," Shanks said.

HARDLUCK HOTEL — What was once to have been Cambodia's most luxurious hotel on the banks of the Mekong and Bassac rivers in Phnom Pehn, is now at full capacity — but not with rich tourists. Ohio Perspective

'Quick take' amendment gets senator's backing

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A state senator from Cincinnati claims approval of the so-called "quick take" amendment could help solve Ohio's pollution and environmental problems.

Sen. Michael J. Maloney, R-7, Cincinnati, referred to Ballot Issue No. 2, a proposed change in the Ohio Constitution that would allow local governments to take property easements for water and sewer improvements by making a deposit rather than having to await litigation fixing a price.

"The owner may litigate the question of value to the fullest, if he considers the amount offered to be inadequate," the senator said.

The amendment he favors is among seven proposed on the May 8 ballot.

Maloney feels the amendment that would lift a constitutional ban on a state lottery has hurt the chances of Issue 2.

"Unfortunately, the lottery question has overshadowed the importance of State Issue No. 2," he said.

Maloney said he believes the language on the ballot describing Issue 2 may be "a bit confusing" but said he strongly urged a "yes" vote as "a step toward clearing up the problems."

He said, "As it stands today, one or two people can sometimes hold up a water or sewer project that will benefit thousands, and often the eastment involves only a narrow strip of unimproved land."

Maloney said the amendment does not grant the broad power of eminent domain to public agencies that would use it, mostly municipalities, counties, and sewer districts. "It would allow them to take immediate possession of a property for construction and maintanance of water and sewer lines," he said.

"It simply speeds up construction by permitting the public agency to take possession after making a deposit . . . and it would not allow property to be taken without compensation."

The senator said much is heard about pollution of Ohio's rivers and streams, and "we will agree something should be done about it. . . here's where every voter can strike a blow against pollution."

He also pointed out that the legislature already has created the Ohio Water Development Authority and the Environmental Protection Agency. Both have "extensive funding" for water and sewer improvements to clean up and protect the environment, he said.

Issue 2 apparently has no organized opposition. The Committee for Issue 2, of which William Knepper of Columbus is chairman, is working for its passage.

There are 128 beaches in Jamaica that are open to everyone. The most famous beaches open to the public are Doctor's Cave in Montego Bay and Dun's River in Ocho Rios.

Pact ratification signed by Gilligan

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Gov. John Gilligan signed a measure Thursday finalizing Ohio ratification of amendments to its Pymatuning Lake Compact with Pennsylvania.

The amendments spell out restrictions on the horsepower of motors which may be used on the lake along the state line in southeastern Ashtabula County.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

SATURDAY, APRIL 28

ARIES
(March 21 to April 20)

An "iffy" sort of day, much depending on your initiative and approach. You have plenty of planetary backing to carry out worthwhile moves and plans, however.

TAURUS
(April 21 to May 21)

You can manage in better-than-average fashion now, but must take precautions not to underestimate or overevaluate new propositions — OR the competition.

GEMINI
(May 22 to June 21)

Here is a splendid day for handling both routine matters and unusual undertaking. New advances indicated in projects which have been standing still.

CANCER
(June 22 to July 23)

Reflexes, intuition and business acumen should be keen now. Especially favored under day's aspects: Research, merchandising, business transactions in general.

LEO
(July 24 to Aug. 23)

By-pass the irrelevant and frivolous. You can make top-rank gains if you concentrate only on the worthwhile, displaying your capabilities effectually.

VIRGO
(Aug. 24 to Sept. 23)

Don't be averse to making changes that offer definite advantages. More interest in things other than the material advised.

LIBRA
(Sept. 24 to Oct. 23)

Waste no time getting this day out of the planning stage and into enthusiastic, well-executed action. Any possible opposition should stimulate you — not annoy.

SCORPIO
(Oct. 24 to Nov. 22)

Generally, you react to all situations brightly. Keep in form now. You should be sparkling with ideas, plans, new and more efficient procedures.

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov. 23 to Dec. 21)

Faced with a decision regarding your home or career, take time to think things over. Leaving everything status quo just MIGHT be the wisest course.

CAPRICORN
(Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)

You can take a lot of strain off next week by lining up programs and anticipated activities for study now. You may need help with some of your problems.

AQUARIUS
(Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)

Dominating influences are happily on the friendly, social side, but a serious note here and there indicates a need for studying situations, backgrounds, people.

PISCES
(Feb. 20 to March 20)

Deal only with the soundly feasible. Don't worry over petty matters, but do by-pass overly ambitious projects. Many "little" things offer so many benefits!

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with unusual sensitivity, a great appreciation of beauty and of the arts. Your love for home and tradition are deep-rooted, and you make excellent historians. You are fond of travel and of social life, yet wish your home life to remain constant. Your tenacity and determination, often in the face of obstacles, coupled with your many talents, could produce top-rank achievement. Taureans often accomplish in more than one career during a busy lifetime. Medicine, art, invention, sculpture, literature and the entertainment fields are strongly represented in Taurus.

Democrats study possible reforms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic party reformers today consider recommendations that include shedding a delegate "quota system" that figured in Sen. George McGovern's presidential nomination.

Lumped together as the Commission on Delegate Selection and Party Structure, the reformers were told by the 1972 convention to study the McGovern rules and recommend changes or improvements. He initially chaired the group.

On the eve of the commission's first meeting, a group of middle-of-the-roaders called for major revision of the McGovern guidelines.

The Coalition for a Democratic Majority recommended a revision of the rule which resulted in the so-called "quotas" for women, minorities and youth in convention delegations.

In place of such a system, the CDM suggested the requirement of a good faith effort to balance delegations.

The object of the recommendations would be elimination of features which enabled McGovern to rise from distant dark horse status to the party's presidential nominee.

The group recommended that the rule on open slatemaking be dropped.

This rule led to Chicago Major Richard Daley's slate of delegates being excluded from last year's convention.

A tactic crucial to McGovern's victory—packing local delegate-selection caucuses—would be prevented by another rule revision.

In addition, the CDM suggested that Democratic governors, senators and House members be made automatic delegates, that state party organizations elect up to 20 per cent of the delegates, and that rules be tightened to prevent defection of delegates won by candidates in primaries.

Man gets life in dual slaying

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — A Stark County Common Pleas Court judge has sentenced Tony Logsdon, 19, of Minerva to life imprisonment for the Dec. 30, 1972, slaying of two women.

Logsdon was sentenced after he pleaded guilty Thursday to lesser charges of second-degree murder. He had been charged with two counts of first-degree murder.

Stark County sheriff's deputies said the two victims, Agnes Anguish, 53, and her daughter, Kathy, 14, were ambushed between their car and their house in Minerva. They had just returned home from the Butterfly Inn in nearby Robertsville.

A friend who followed the Anguishes home at their request told deputies he heard Kathy scream and then heard gunshots. Deputies said Logsdon dated the Anguish girl at one time.

Outlook considered bright for pension plan regulation

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — American workers now have at least $137 billion in private pension assets. Of at least 30 million workers covered, 4.7 million are receiving annual benefits that exceed $7.4 billion a year.

These figures all are minimums, because they were compiled in 1970. Growth since then has been swift in many respects, and assets by 1980 are projected to exceed $250 billion. In 1940 they totaled $2.4 billion.

The consequences grow too, not only for workers covered but for the entire economy of the nation. Even in a trilliondollar economy, a sum in the billions carries great power.

Banks depend upon it, the stock market needs it, corporations rely on it as a source of capital financing. Thousands of bankers, lawyers, trustees and other professionals, and many times that number of ancillary workers, earn their living from it.

And there is still another great consequence, perhaps more potential than real. That is the possibility of fraud, conspiracy or other misuse of funds by those who manage them.

In a comprehensive pension study just released, Bankers Trust describes how "the man on Main Street probably imagines a perpetual series of conspiracies for the control of corporations."

The ingredients of the "plot" are that billions of dollars of stock are held by pension funds, which are managed by banks. Other institutions, like investment trusts and insurers, hold billions more.

Now add to this recipe the fact that "the directors of these institutions know one another and work within the narrow radius of the lower end of Manhattan" and you have the makings of problems.

Despite these major national considerations it is the personal stake in pensions that concerns most workers and their families. And yet many workers know very little of their rights and expectations.

It is for reasons such as these that various congressional committees are studying many proposals to set standards for fiduciary responsibilities, vesting, disclosure of information and funding.

While the complexity of the subject matter and the many varieties of pension plans is slowing action, prospects are bright that Congress will be able to reach agreement on provisions this year and probably pass a bill in 1974.

So far the focus of three main proposals is on vesting.

—A bill submitted by Sens. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., and Harrison A. Williams, D-N.J., proposes that after eight years of service a pension be 30 per cent vested.

That means a worker would have a nonforfeitable right to 30 per cent of benefits accrued under terms of the plan, even if he ceased to be an employe. The benefits would be paid on retirement.

Each year thereafter vesting would increase by 10 per cent until, after 15 years, the employe would be 100 per cent vested.

—Rep. John Dent, D-Pa., proposes that after 10 years of service an employe be 100 per cent vested.

—The Nixon administration proposes the rule of 50. When age and service add up to 50, a person becomes 50 per cent vested, that is, entitled to one-half the pension rights accrued under the particular plan, to be paid on retirement.

Vesting would increase 10 per cent a year after the rule of 50 applied, so that rights to a full pension would be reached in another five years.

How do you determine if you are vested?

A new federal regulation expected to become effective July 31 would require employers to make available to workers the pertinent facts regarding their plan in laymen's terms.

O'Grady, patrolmen win insurance awards

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Association of Insurance Agents presented state Highway Safety Director Eugene O'Grady with a plaque Thursday in recognition for his leadership in the highway safety field.

Also receiving plaques during the group's mid-year conference were state Highway Patrol officers Richard P. Wells and John E. Spitler, both of the Piqua post, for recovering seven stolen cars each.

The association also presented the patrolmen with vacation trips to Hawaii for winning the Patrol's "Blue Max" award competition by recovering the most stolen vehicles.

Canada's first settlers relied on wildlife — deer, fish, fowl, buffalo and rabbits — and their meat needs.

'MA THICKET' is the affectionate nickname Mrs. Ethel Osborne Hill of Port Arthur, Tex., garnered in her fight to save the Big Thicket region from additional development.

Senior citizen leads conservation battle

By DIANA RINEHART
Leader Staff Writer

ORANGE, Tex. (AP) — If you've ever used the term "over-the-hill gang" in reference to our nation's senior citizens, you better change your tune quick!

Especially if you are going to meet 94-year-old Mrs. Ethel Osborne Hill of Port Arthur.

She's a conservationist, naturalist, author, lecturer, educator and member of the governor's committees on aging. The only hills this extraordinary woman is going over are those which lead to her next lecture, committee meeting or her beloved cabin in the Big Thicket area.

Widely known from the Sabine River through the piney woods all the way to Austin, Mama Hill, as she's affectionately known, has been the guiding light, constant energizer and perpetual motion of the "save the Big Thicket" program in Texas and the nation. In fact, she also is known as "Ma Thicket."

SHE IS the only living member of the original 10-member Big Thicket Association formed in 1930. Each summer she returns to her log cabin home deep in the Thicket, a half mile from the highway, southeast of Woodville.

There she is close to the trees, leaves, animals, flowers and land she loves. It includes her friends, the Alabama-Coushetta Indians, whose tribal village is only 16 miles away.

From her summer base she gathers materials from the land. All are to be used during the winter months, back in her Port Arthur home, to make her nature handicrafts.

As Mama Hill says, "There's nothing that is nothing. Everything is something."

From all these somethings like a fallen twig, armadillo bones, leaves, shells, stones, feathers, petals, pine cones, she will create a picture, bookmark, paper weight, pencil holder, anything!

SHARING her creative talents and keen imagination with others, Mama Hill has taught handicrafts each summer for the past 14 years to young people at the United Methodist District Encampment near Palestine.

She also spends three weeks each summer at scout camps in Tyler County teaching crafts as well as her own Cub Scout Troop in Woodville.

Mama Hill's love affair with nature started when she was 6 years old, a time she vividly remembers.

Born in Ames, Iowa, she remembers Dr. Seaman A. Knapp, a friend of her father and president of A&M College at Ames, who first taught her the beauty of all God's creatures.

"We would go for long walks in the orchard or down by the streams," recalled Mama Hill, "Dr. Knapp would show me the veins in the leaves and tell me how each one was special.

"No two were alike. Just like you hands, he said, there are no two hands alike. All hands are special," she remembers.

MAMA HILL brought her love of trees, animals and flowers along when the family moved to Texas in 1887. As she says, "I never was a Yankee; always a Texan."

And as a Texan she has implanted her mark of love and concern on everything she's touched.

Her journalistic endeavors for preservation of the Big Thicket began in 1926 when she wrote a series of articles for an area newspaper.

She continued writing for a number of area newspapers and still writes a weekly column for the Tyler County Booster and Piney Wood Press.

She has captured her thoughts and memories in three books of poetry, all of which have been published. Last year she completed a book of stories on early years in the Thicket titled, "God's Children, All — Red, White and Black."

"I'm still waiting to have it published," related Mama Hill, "actually, I guess you'd say I'm waiting to get the money together to have it published."

A FRIEND to the young, old, well-known and unknown, Mama Hill was named "Woman of the Year" in Texas in 1970. Her most recent honor was bestowed when she was named a life member of the Tyler County Chamber of Commerce and honored for her outstanding civic work.

A new variety of dogwood tree, planted last Arbor Day, stands in the courthouse square in Woodville — named in her honor.

With 94 years of living behind her, Mama Hill has never had a headache, nor an earache. In fact, she doesn't even wear glasses.

"I tell my young students," said Mama Hill, "life is like going from one grade to another. You wouldn't want to stay in the second grade all your life.

"Old age is the pinnacle of life. You have so many things to remember. So much to share with others. I wouldn't want to be young again.

"The only thing," concluded Mama Hill, "I wish I could live for 94 more years. There are so many things I still want to do."

Women ROTC students do surprisingly well

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — A campus beauty queen showed up at her first military formation with an ice cream cone. One girl appeared in the Army office wearing a fatigue jacket and short shorts. And three of 45 women students have dropped out of the program completely.

Otherwise, the men in charge of the new women's Army ROTC program at Pennsylvania State University say the five-year test project is off to a smooth start.

"We're finding the girls are setting a high academic trend," said Maj. John Riddiford. He organized Penn State's program which the Army started last fall for freshmen women in 10 campuses.

"All of the scholarship winners had higher Scholastic Aptitude Test scores than any of the men ever had," Riddiford said.

Women at Penn State hold six of 20 new Army ROTC scholarships for coeds. Each is valued at about $11,000.

According to Army spokesmen, the women's ROTC program has several purposes: to determine if it will be expanded to the more than 290 schools now offering ROTC to men, to offer equal military opportunities to women and to catch up with the Air Force and Navy which already have opened their ROTC ranks to women.

The purpose of ROTC is to train a sufficient number of active duty and reserve Army officers.

The Air Force program, started in 1970, has 1,426 women ranging from freshmen to seniors. "It's been going extremely well," said Maj. John Duemmel, an Air Force spokesman. "The program will continue."

The Navy first began including women in its ROTC program in March 1972, but they could apply only for 16 openings in a scholarship program.

"Next year, 100 women will be eligible to join the non-scholarship program as well," said Lt. Cmdr. Dale Pearson, head of the Navy's college recruiting. "From an interest standpoint, it's been very successful."

So far, 212 women participate in the Army ROTC program nationally. Of these, 42 are at Penn State.

Why do they join?

"It offers an opportunity to be more than an office girl when you graduate," said Martha Lower, 19, of Altoona, Pa. "There seem to be greater opportunities in terms of responsibility."

"I like being the first of a new breed," said Susan Rodems, an 18-year old liberal arts major from Syracuse, N.Y., and ROTC scholarship winner.

"The starting salary is better for second lieutenants than for school teachers," said a third girl. "And besides, it's a good way to meet men."

Capt. Stephen Linthwaite, the freshmen's 25-year-old instructor, said the women's presence in ROTC has not posed many problems.

"Except for little things," he said, "like deciding the length of uniform hems—a good two inches above the knee is acceptable—and finding shoes that weren't thick rubber-soled clunkers, it's gone pretty smoothly.

"Some of the men were skeptical at first, but now the seniors are wondering why this didn't happen three years ago."

Except for not teaching weapons' handling and flying, the women ROTC curriculum doesn't differ from the men's training.

Coeds are expected to drill with the men, attend summer camp between their junior and senior years and receive commissions as second lieutenants after graduating.

Army regulations stipulate that women cannot participate in flight instruction, airborne training, field combat training and activities "beyond the normal physical strength of women." They are not required to bear arms or participate in marksmanship training.

Most of the women interviewed said they didn't care about the restriction—"I'm gun-shy" was a common response.

One of the women's chief complaints is that their friends sometimes tease them about joining ROTC.

"The guys you go out with think you're either a nymphomanic or a lesbian if you want to join the Army," said one indignant woman. "I don't hate men. I have a boy friend."

Besides Penn State, the other schools participating in the program are Eastern Kentucky University, Richmond, Ky.; Florida State University, Tallahassee, Fla.; South Carolina State College, Orangeburg, S.C.; Indiana University, Bloomington, Ind.; Louisiana State University, Baton Rouge, La.; Texas A & I University, Kingsville, Tex.; South Dakota State University, Brookings, S.D.; Arizona State University, Tempe, Ariz.; and University of Hawaii, Honolulu.

Seek Kansas City escapee for $93,000 bank robbery

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The FBI and local police said they are searching for Earl Edwin Austin, 31, an escapee from the Jackson County Jail in Kansas City, in connection with the $93,000 holdup of a bank in suburban Whitehall Thursday.

Whitehall police said Austin, also wanted for a March 15 robbery in Dayton, was believed to be in the company here of three other men sought for bank robberies in New Orleans; Tulsa, Okla., and Iowa.

The others are Gary Williams, 25, Kenneth Greathouse, 26, and Jim Murphy, 32. Greathouse and Murphy also escaped from the Kansas City jail, but at different times, according to police.

Whitehall police said a car sold to a local dealer Monday was identified as the one used in the Dayton holdup and Austin and Greathouse were identified as having stayed in a motel near the bank Monday.

The Ohio State Bank in Whitehall's Great Eastern Shopping Center was held up by a man who handed the manager, Donald Dozer, a note announcing the robbery and then instructed Dozer to walk with him into the vault.

The man, armed with a .38-caliber revolver, filled one sack with cash and took two others that already were full. He then walked with Dozer out the door and fled, presumably in an auto that was seen parked in the rear of the building with its engine running.

Dozer was left outside the bank.

Officials said other bank employes and customers apparently were unaware the holdup was taking place.

The robbery was one of the largest ever in this area. Whitehall police said an armored truck was due to pick up the cash just minutes after the robbery occurred.

As the grains of sand slowly make their way through the glass enclosure of the hour glass. . .it is once again time to remember the best sandwich in town.

Mass transit backers lose round

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A recommendation to change the Ohio Constitution to authorize use of earmarked highway funds for other forms of transportation — namely mass transit — has hit another snag in the Ohio Constitutional Revision Commission.

After a three hour session Thursday that produced no agreement, the commission voted 11-6 to send it back to its Committee on Taxation which studied it several months.

The powerful highway lobby is fighting the change with assertions that revenues derived from highway use taxes are now not sufficient for highways and will not be in the future. Two of their spokesmen testified before the commission at Thursday's meeting.

Members are studying a proposal to recommend to the legislature that an amendment be placed before the voters to allow use of highway tax revenues for other purposes upon two-thirds approval of the legislature.

James W. Shocknessy, chairman of the Ohio Turnpike Commission and a member of the commission, offered an amendment that would have reduced the legislative margin for fund shifts from two-thirds to a simple majority. After debate, his amendment failed 9-10.

Another unsuccessful amendment would have changed the proposal to recommend to the legislature that the entire constitutional sections containing the restriction be repealed. It lost 8-11.

Sen. Oliver Ocasek, D-27 Akron, a member of the Committee on Taxation, said he was concerned about "the deep division" among members over what to do, and moved that the proposal be returned to committee. His motion carried 11-6.

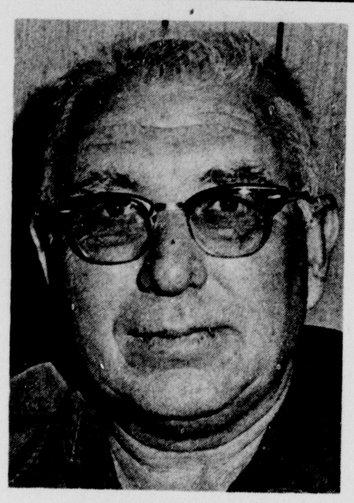

Commission Chairman Richard Carter of Fostoria asked the committee to have new proposals ready for the next meeting when "it will be made the first order of business."

Trustees, clerks hear speakers

Judge sees 'Rock and Roll' as Communistic 'disease'

Common Pleas Court Judge Evelyn W. Coffman was the guest speaker Thursday night at a dinner meeting of the Township Clerks and Trustees Association, hosted by County Engineer Charles P. Wagner in the Mahan Building.

Judge Coffman's topic was "Rock and Roll Music" in which she discussed the Communistic influence of youth through music.

Judge Coffman said a Communist leader in America has stated that the youth would be reached through music.

Referring to various research sources, she said the beat of rock music is not only heard, but felt, placing people in a semi-hypnotic state in which they can be sold on anything.

SHE LISTED several rock bands whose members are users of illegal drugs, and related the story of one band leader who was arrested in Miami, Fla., by the U. S. Attorney General's office for presenting a lewd and indecent exhibition at a concert attended by 14,000 youth with an average age of 12 to 14 years.

Quoting Newsweek Magazine, she stated that 95 per cent of the 500,000 persons who attended the Woodstock Rock Festival were smoking marijuana.

Judge Coffman also cited a case in which a teenager listening to rock music committed a murder, and another case in which a daily diet of rock music caused a 14-year-old boy to become maladjusted.

She said the titles of the songs being played speak for themselves and referred directly to: "Hashish," "Sodomy," "Walking In Space" and "Strawberry Fields Forever."

SHE SAID that when rock and roll was originated about 10 years ago it was termed "heathenistic, atheistic and immoral." She said that at that time a short life was predicted for this type music, but instead it has gone to the top.

She pointed out that adults are unable to understand the words of the rock music, but the kids do. "This music is more than music. It is a dreaded disease," Judge Coffman said.

OTHER SPEAKERS at the dinner meeting were Richard Keiser, of the engineer's office; Dr. William E. Covert, health commissioner, and Wagner.

Keiser said that effective May 1, all deeds must go to the engineer's office before they are recorded. Also, plats will be required for all new surveys or renewed descriptions of land parcels.

He said the reason for the changes is the increased building and subdivision of land in the county.

Dr. Covert reviewed the financial situation of the Health Department and informed the trustees that an additional tax levy for health services would probably appear on the November ballot. He said the need for additional funds has been precipitated by a drop in personal property taxes, the Homestead Act, 10 per cent rollback on real estate taxes and inflation.

Wagner reported that the continued rainfall is causing several culverts to collapse. He said six bridge projects are being planned for this summer.

Workers off across Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Millions of Japanese got a holiday from work today, thanks to a three-day transport strike kicking off the annual spring labor offensive for higher wages.

More than three million workers struck at dawn for 72 hours. The walkout was led by employes of the government and private railway companies, but they were joined by harbor workers, telephone and telegraph operators, postoffice employes, hospital staffs, teachers and workers in government offices.

Workers on the privately owned railways called off their walkout this afternoon after winning a $55.47 monthly wage boost.

But the 250,000 employes of the National Railways stayed out as negotiations continued on their demands for an average hike of $78 monthly, the right to strike for themselves and all other government employes, and an admission from the government that past disciplinary action against them was too harsh.

More than 24 million people were unable to get to work. The private rail workers agreed to settle early in the afternoon, but by then nearly 18,000 trains had been immobilized.

About 380 helmeted radical students demonstrating in support of the strikers were arrested outside a Tokyo station and charged with obstructing police.

The big department stores and many other businesses did not open. Many offices were closed. Some companies got their employes to work by car or special buses, while others laid out mattresses on the premises for those who refused to go home Thursday night.

One of the two major domestic airlines was struck. The sleek, high-speed trains of the Tokyo-Osaka-Okayama line thinned out to one every two hours; normally they leave Tokyo and Osaka every 15 minutes.

Woman killed by twister

BATH, N.C. (AP) — A Beaufort County woman was killed and her husband injured early today when a tornado struck their mobile home.

A spokesman for the Beaufort County sheriff's department said the twister touched down at 5 a.m. at a trailer occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Buck Brinn west of Bath.

Brinn was hospitalized with injuries believed to be serious, the spokesman said.

The National Weather Service said its first notice of the tornado came from the Beaufort County Civil Defense Agency following the incident.

Further details were not immediately available.

Youth, 17, stabbed; officers seek dad

Sheriff's deputies are looking for a Bloomingburg man who allegedly stabbed his son during a family quarrel Thursday night.

Officers said Jimmy McCallister, 17, Rt. 1, Bloomingburg, was treated at Memorial Hospital for a stab wound in his left chest and later released. His father, Oval McCallister, is wanted for questioning.

According to investigating officers, the youth and his father were involved in a fight at the family's Myers Road home. They said McCallister reportedly stabbed his son with a butcher knife after the youth had hit him with a chair. McCallister had the knife concealed in his trousers, officers said.

The elder McCallister fled following the stabbing and is still being sought.

A 1971 MODEL trail bike was stolen from the patio of the Gloria Morris home, Good Hope. She told officers the theft occurred Tuesday evening. The bike was valued at $366.

Kenneth L. Petitt, Rt. 4, reported the theft of 20 rods of wire fencing from a field along Ohio 41, just south of Inskeep Road. Petitt said that he was constructing a new fence in the field and had left the fence there Wednesday night. The roll, valued at $75, was gone Thursday morning.

Sheriff's deputies recovered a truck that apparently had been stolen from Miami, Fla., earlier this month. The truck was discovered parked in the lot at the Union 76 Plaza, I-71 and U. S. 35, Wednesday evening.

Officers said the truck had been rented for one day from a Miami rental firm on April 3, but had never been returned. The truck was impounded on the station lot.

Teachers protest Fairfield cutback

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The State Teachers Guild of Ohio said it was planning a rally at the Statehouse today to protest the proposed cutback of 25 teaching positions at the Fairfield School for Boys.

The guild is an affiliate of the Ohio AFL-CIO and represents teachers and social workers at state institutions.

Charles W. DeGrove, spokesman for the group, said the Ohio Youth Commission's planned cutback will eliminate at least 25 positions at tha school.

He said no provisions are being made for those teachers who may be laid off.

Private ownership of gold supported

WASHINGTON (AP) — Since 1934, U.S. citizens have been forbidden by law to own or trade in gold as an investment. For all that time varying numbers of them have been trying to have the ban repealed.

Now, in the wake of two devaluations of the dollar, opponents of the gold-ownership ban may be closer than ever to achieving their goal. But the odds still appear to be against any permission in the near future for private individuals in this country to operate freely in the gold market.

Legislation to formalize the second dollar devaluation carried out during President Nixon's administration gave the gold-ownership forces a chance to press their cause. Before the Senate passed the devaluation bill, they succeeded in attaching an amendment repealing the gold-ownership ban as of Dec. 31, 1973.

The legislation is not as far along in the House, where the Banking Committee still has to pass on it. A subcommittee has approved a provision repealing the prohibition—but effective only when the president makes a finding that the international monetary situation has been stabilized enough to make such a move advisable.

Unless this provision is changed by the full committee or the entire House to conform with the Senate language, it will be up to a conference committee—and ultimately the two chambers—to agree on the terms that finally become effective.

Both Nixon's administration and the autonomous Federal Reserve Board contend that, while there no longer is any long-range justification for maintaining the rigid prohibition on gold ownership, a change now could hamper forthcoming international discussions aimed at stabilizing the world monetary system and set up another speculative assault against the dollar.

Rep. Philip M. Crane, R-Ill., who tried unsuccessfully to persuade the House Banking subcommittee to adopt the language of the Senate amendment, and Sen. James A. McClure, R-Idaho, author of the amendment, have argued that the Treasury's own announced policy of diminishing the importance of gold in the world monetary system is an argument for permitting private ownership.

Prince Charles gets promotion

LONDON (AP) — Prince Charles, the heir to the British throne, will be promoted to acting lieutenant in the Royal Navy on May 1, the Ministry of Defense announced today.

With the promotion from sub-lieutenant, the 24-year-old prince's navy pay will go up from $5,250 to $6,625. But Charles, who reportedly gets half a million dollars a year as Prince of Wales and Duke of Cornwall, has been giving his navy pay to navy charities.

The defense ministry said the promotion was routine since he will complete 18 months on duty on May 1. He is serving as assistant navigation officer on the survey ship Fox in the West Indies.

Driver charged after collision

A driver was cited in one of three traffic mishaps investigated in the city-county area Thursday.

Police charged Gerald L. Ragland, 37, of 436 Broadway, with failure to yield right of way after a two-car collision on Columbus Avenue, just east of Elm Street at 3:56 p.m.

Officers said the Ragland car pulled from the drive at Washington Square into the path of an eastbound car driven by Brenda K. Oesterle, 21, Rt. 5. Damage was moderate.

A car driven by John A. Stiffler, 65, of 1222 S. Hinde St., and a truck driven by Edward E. Knisley, 37, Rt. 2, were involved in a minor accident at the intersection of Fayette Street and Ohio Avenue Thursday afternoon.

Stiffler told police his foot slipped off the brake as he stopped on Ohio Avenue and the car rolled forward, hitting the truck in the right side. The truck was turning off Fayette Street at the time.

Sheriff's deputies investigated a hitskip accident at Webb's Grocery, Waterloo, Tuesday morning. Officers said a car had pulled onto the store lot and struck a gas pump, then drove away. Damage was minor.

Demonstration by students hits Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The Central Organization of Workers called an emergency meeting today to "mobilize immediately in defense of the government" following demonstrations against the Marxist regime by most of Santiago's 110,000 high school students.

Jorge Godoy, the Socialist president of the country's labor federation, promised that workers would make daily demonstrations in support of the government.

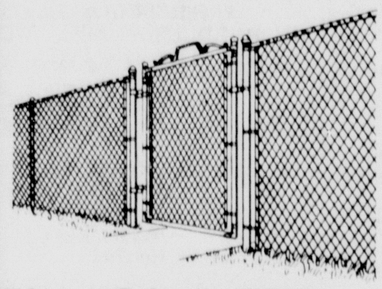

The labor chieftain met late Thursday with President Salvador Allende.

"We will not tolerate any insolence from the reactionaries," Godoy said. He claimed Thursday's young demonstrators were "politically manipulated" and their parents "should order them off the streets."

There were continuous disturbances in the city Thursday, and more than 250 persons were arrested and 100 hurt. One student threw a Molotov cocktail against the presidential palace, and a barrage of cobblestones broke more than 30 of the palace windows.

Calm was restored by evening. But in a 20-block area downtown shop windows were broken, rocks and smouldering debris littered the streets and tear gas hung in the air.

Claim fewer people now get tattoos

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fewer people and more animals are getting tattoos, the National Geographic Society says.

A survey indicates that the concern of health authorities about disease from contaminated needles largely has prompted the closing of many tattoo parlors throughout the world, a society spokesman said Thursday.

In a report on the tattoo front, the society said:

"As more tattoo parlors close in the world's seaports, the number of people acquiring epidermal artwork is declining. But growing numbers of pets and livestock now sport tattoos.

"For several years, race horses have had identifying numbers tattooed inside their lips to prevent 'fixing' a race by substituting a skillfully dyed faster horse for one originally entered.

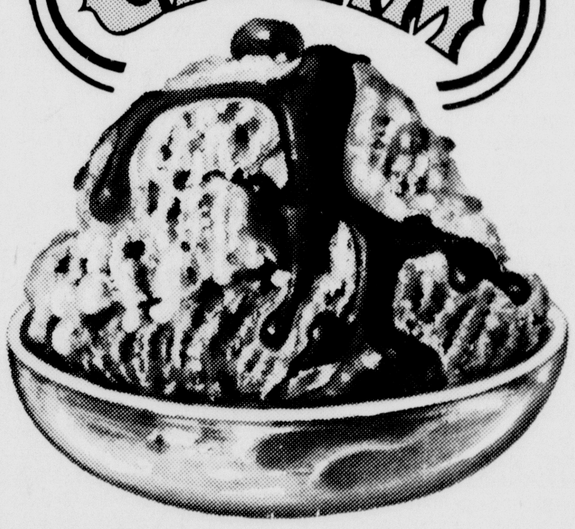

"Poultry farmers brand their turkeys with tattoos under the wings to facilitate recovery in case of theft. And dog owners have begun putting registered marks or numbers inside their pet's ears to combat dognapers."

Time bomb hits barracks

BELFAST (AP) — A time bomb planted in a car blew up a British army barracks in Armagh today, wrecking five cars and slightly injuring several persons.

The bomb presumably was the work of the Irish Republican Army, but neither the IRA nor the British army had any immediate comment about this.

CLAY CARROLL

Reds entertain Phillies tonight

Carroll hopes to end tragic pitching start

CINCINNATI (AP) — Clay Carroll used to plow the garden behind his parents' Alabama home, a fact some fans won't let him forget.

"That's the only plowing I ever did, it honestly is," says the swaggering, barrel-chested Cincinnati Reds relief pitcher, who's off to a miserable start this season after taking "fireman of the year" honors in 1972.

Carroll was irritated after a game in Atlanta late last season, a leather-lunged fan having greeted his mount appearance with a raucous, "Hey, plowboy!"

Later, during the National League playoffs with Pittsburgh, the same voice intoned the same message at Cincinnati's Riverfront Stadium.

"I guess he must have been following me around," laughs Carroll, a good natured, gentle 202-pounder whose late-inning heroics netted him a major league record 37 saves last season.

The heckler hasn't shown his face, or voice, this season, but neither has Carroll's pitching touch.

In six appearances totaling two and two-thirds innings, Carroll has allowed seven hits, six earned runs and four walks. His earned run average is a lofty 18.00, compared to the 2.25 ERA he posted last year.

"I know I haven't been doing the job," Carroll said. "Everyone can see that. But, you know, the last couple years I started slow, and I really came back later. I'll be back, you can be sure of that."

Carroll's positive attitude is a product of his days in the minor leagues in towns like Quad City, Boise and Austin.

"I remember down there I'd lose one, and I'd hang my head down," he recalls. "I'd look at the other guys and wonder what they were thinking. You just can't do that."

Carroll, 31, a fast ball specialist who came here from Atlanta in 1968, took advantage of an off-day Thursday to throw hard for 20 minutes along with Tom Hall, another Cincinnati reliever who's having early season troubles.

Carroll said the session helped.

"I threw all my pitches," he drawled, "and I feel much better. I think I've got things worked out now. I just need some work.

"That's the thing I like about relief pitching," he mused. "When you don't do well, you've always got a chance the next day. You can come right back."

The next day for Carroll could be tonight. The Reds host Philadelphia in the opener of a three-game series.

Cincinnati's Ross Grimsley, 3-0, will oppose Philadelphia ace Steve Carlton, 3-2, in a battle of lefthanders.

Washington C. H.'s track team received strong support from the individuals in the running events to salvage a tie with Franklin Heights Thursday night in a triangular meet at Miami Trace.

Head coach John Armstrong's Blue Lion thinclads and Franklin Heights finished with 55 points apiece and Miami Trace was only six points off the pace with 49 markers.

The Lions stacked up five victories in the running events of the meet which was not decided until the mile relay, the final running event of the meet.

FRANKLIN HEIGHTS landed only four first place finishes, but made up the difference with eight seconds. Miami Trace won four of the five field events and only one running event.

Washington C. H.'s 880-yard relay team turned in a sparkling 1:36.8 winning performance with Randy East, Jeff Willis, Brian Storm and Chuck Wilson.

Storm, a senior speedster, was one of the double winners in the meet as he won the 100 and 220-yard dashes. Sophomore Ron Warnock, of Miami Trace, won the shot put and discus events and the only other twin-winner was Gary Jones, of Franklin Heights, as he captured the long jump and low hurdles.

Mets nudge Houston, 2-1

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It's a good thing that Tug McGraw doesn't listen to his catcher. Duffy Dyer said, "screwball" and McGraw replied, "fastball."

The New Yorl Mets' star relief pitcher then threw the pitch of his choice past Cesar Cedeno for a key strikeout that helped preserve a 2-1 victory over the Houston Astros Thursday night.

"I shook off Dyer three times before he called the fastball," said McGraw about a tense ninth-inning situation. "I had thrown screwball, screwball and curveball. I just felt that I could get the fastball past him, and that's what happened."

McGraw, who had entered the game after starter Jim McAndrew pitched seven innings, gave up a leadoff single in the ninth to ex-Met Tommie Agee that put the potential winning run at the plate.

McGraw got Tommy Helms on a fly ball before striking out the heavy-hitting Cedeno. Then Bob Watson bounced out and McGraw had his fourth save of the young season.

The San Francisco Giants defeated the Chicago Cubs 7-3 in the only other National League game played Thursday. In the American League, the Detroit Tigers beat the Texas Rangers 3-2; the Milwaukee Brewers notched a 7-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals and the Oakland A's nipped the Cleveland Indians 3-2.

Chris Speier and Gary Thomasson batted in two runs each as San Francisco won its fourth straight game and ninth in the last 10. The victory put the high-riding Giants 2½ games up over Cincinnati in the NL West.

"I can't remember when we swept a series over the Cubs in Wrigley Field," said San Francisco Manager Charlie Fox. "But it's a good, good feeling to come in here and win three in a row."

Aurelio Rodriguez capped a three-run rally in the ninth inning with a two-run triple, powering the Tigers over the Rangers. Just an inning before, the Rangers had broken up a scoreless pitching duel between Detroit's Woody Fryman and Texas' Pete Broberg with a run on Ken Suarez' double.

Dave May topped a five-run rally in the ninth inning with a grand slam home run as Milwaukee beat Kansas City. May's dramatic blast came after Kansas City pitcher Bruce Dal Canton had intentionally walked Pedro Garcia to load the bases.

"I wasn't thinking 'home run'—I just wanted to get the ball in the air," said May. "I didn't think it was going out. The ball hit down on the lower part of the bat, very low. I've hit lots of balls better."

Bert Campaneris's basesloaded single provided the winning run as the A's rallied in the ninth to beat the Indians. Campaneris' hit to right-center scored pinch-runner John Odom from third base to give the victory to relief pitcher Darold Knowles.

Panther game called because of darkness

Miami Trace's unbeaten baseball team fought Chillicothe to a 3-3 deadlock Thursday night in a game which was called after eight innings because of darkness.

Head coach Dave Pellior's Panthers had to come from behind to salvage the tie as Chillicothe jumped to a 3-0 lead after two innings of play.

The Panthers bounced back with runs in the fourth and fifth innings and knotted the contest with a run in the seventh.

Senior Dave Arnold started for Miami Trace and was charged with all three Chillicothe runs. Arnold scattered seven hits, fanned five and walked two. Randy Reiber hurled the final two innings and came up with a pair of strikeouts.

All-South Central Ohio League infielder Tony Grooms sparked Miami Trace's 10-hit attack with a double and a single while Pete Jones and Jeff Spears had two hits each. Jones also scored all three of Miami Trace's runs.

Prep grid playoff sites are selected

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The Ohio High School Athletic Association is making a rerun of its title sites for the first state football playoffs last fall.

Akron's Rubber Bowl, with 38,000 seats; Massillon High School, seating 21,000, and Ohio Wesleyan University, accommodating 8,000, were awarded the 1973 championship games Thursday by the OHSAA state board of control.

All will be played Friday, Nov. 23, with the Class A finalists at Ohio Wesleyan playing in the afternoon.

The Class AAA championship in the Rubber Bowl and the Class AA finale at Massillon are scheduled at night.

The OHSAA experimented with different days for its playoffs last year, but Commissioner Harold Meyer told the board, "We have found that fans think of Friday as the traditional high school football time."

In line with that, the semifinals games in all classes wll be played Friday night, Nov. 16.

The Class AAA semifinals match the Southeastern and Southwestern Regional champions at the University of Cincinnati and the Northeastern and Northwestern victors in the Rubber Bowl.

In Class AA, it will be the Southwestern vs. the Southeastern at Lancaster and the Northeastern vs. the Northwestern at Massillon.

In Class A, the Southeastern winner draws the Northwestern winner at Mansfield and the Northeastern and Southwestern champions play at Upper Arlington.

The regional winners are determined by weekly computerized ratings compiled by a Columbus firm for the OHSAA.

'Coachie' enjoys her job as Olentangy golf mentor

DELAWARE, Ohio (AP)— Olentangy High School golfers affectionately call Sue Heisler "Coachie."

The first woman to coach the boys' sport for an Ohio school took the job as a lark. Now it's a serious business for her.

"It started as a joke. Our regular golf coach resigned after school started in the fall. I knew I would take a razzing from the students," she said.

Now Miss Heisler, an Ohio University coed at this time last year, sounds like her male coaching rivals.

"They are a young team, a team of the future," said Miss Heisler, 23, a native of Ravenna who comes from an athletic family.

Her brother Yank, an Akron banker, was twice Ohio high school golf champion. Her dad Bob, president of a Ravenna iron firm, is in the Ohio Wesleyan University Hall of Fame.

"What's really sad is that I have five younger sisters and none of them plays golf. It just kills me," said Miss Heisler, her hazel eyes snapping.

Despite her status, Miss Heisler is not a women's libber. In fact, an Ohio High School Athletic Association rule prohibiting girls from boys' sports draws her support.

"I think that's the way it should be, boys against boys and girls against girls," said the woman, who has played golf since she was 9.

"I shoot in the mid-80s when I'm playing regularly," said Miss Heisler, who played three seasons with the Ohio University women's team.

She said rival male golf coaches have shown no animosity toward her.

"They've been very pleasant," she said. "They open doors and buy coffee for me."

Miss Heisler doubles as the Delaware County school's junior high school cheerleader adviser. She said there's no comparison between coaching boys and girls.

"The boys are easier to coach. You only have to tell them once. They listen to you," she said before an afternoon of spotting flaws in her golfers' grips and swings.

Knicks hope to oust Celts

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Silas and Dave DeBusschere, two of the best rebounders and defensive forwards in basketball, will resume their private war within a war tonight when the New York Knicks seek to end their National Basketball Association playoff series against the Boston Celtics.

The Knicks lead the Celtics 3-2 in the best-of-7 Eastern Conference finals and a victory in tonight's nationally televised (ABC, 9 p.m., EST) game would move them into the NBA finals against the defending champion Los Angeles Lakers, who beat Golden State 4-1 in the West.

Meanwhile, the American Basketball Association's championship playoff series between the Kentucky Colonels and Indiana Pacers gets under way Saturday in a nationally televised game at Louisville, Ky.

Both those teams finished second during the regular season, but Kentucky defeated Carolina 4-3 for the East Division title and Indiana took Utah 4-2 for the West Division crown.

Silas, the 6-foot-7 veteran who came to the Celtics from Phoenix following last season in exchange for the rights to Charlie Scott, was an unlikely hero in Boston's 98-97 victory in Game No. 5 Wednesday night. He scored just nine points—but they included a 30-foot bank shot that was the Celtics' only basket in the final eight minutes, and two free throws with seven seconds left on the clock which put the Celtics on top for good.

DeBusschere, meanwhile, has does his usual workmanlike job, which has been good enough to earn him All-Star and All-NBA defensive team honors. He's averaging 17.8 points and 9.4 rebounds per game against Boston, and knows he'll have to concentrate on keeping Silas away from the boards.

If the Celtics win, the seventh and deciding game will be played in Boston Sunday afternoon. If not, the Knicks go on to meet Los Angeles—and Boston, the team with the best regular-season record in the NBA, will go home.

Steele Data Processing Plans major expansion

KEYPUNCHERS — These girls, who work at Steele Data Processing, Inc., punch the keyboards of National Cash Register Co. 735's, translating ordinary written material into magnetic tape for use in computers. Some of them strike the keyboard 19,000 times an hour, or 5 times a second.

By GEORGE MALEK

Steel Data Processing, Inc., has purchased the Chakeres Building, next door to the firm's present location, 240 E. Court St., and the Ohio Employment Service office, which now occupies the Chakeres Building, will soon vacate in order to allow for the enlargement and expansion of SDP services.

The company, formed by President Marie Steele and her husband, Jim, in 1968, has grown from a staff of four at that time to the present level of 90, including 49 persons who work at a branch office in Portsmouth. Currently, Mrs. Steele heads sales while her husband is in charge of personnel.

Data processing is the procedure through which everyday writing and tables of data are retyped into symbolic languages that computers are designed to use. At the present time, SDP has no computer; it only translates written material onto magnetic tape for use in computers elsewhere.

THE EXPANSION scheduled for Juen will change that. SDP will lease a Honeywell 2000 computer and have it installed at the Court Street location. This addition will not only make its present operations more efficient, but will also allow the firm to offer a complete computerized-data service.

In simplified terms, if a company wants a column of numbers added, it can now send them to SDP to be punched onto magnetic tape. The tape is then sent back to the company to be run through a computer. After June of this year SDP will be able to run the tape through its own computer and send the answer back to the company completed.

In conjunction with the new facilities, E. Charles Boehm Jr. has joined the Steeles on the executive level. Formerly a vice president of CoDaSci Inc., Columbus, he will head computer operations and sales.

When the new services are available, Steele Data hopes to interest local firms in computer services which they either could not obtain or could not afford elsewhere. Steele Data Processing offers the only service of this type in rural Southern Ohio and does very well competing with companies in Columbus, Cincinnati and Dayton. The office here serves clients from New York to St. Louis, the largest ones being Ohio public welfare and Indiana motor vehicle departments.

THE VOLUME of material coming in has been so great that most of SDP's employes have been working 50 or more hours per week since February, and some potential clients still had to be turned down. This is especially significant since it was only last fall that SDP opened its office in Portsmouth.

Mrs. Steele attributes this primarily to her company's reputation for accuracy. In competitive companies "2 per cent error is standard; our errors are 1-10th of 1 per cent. Tapes are checked and rechecked, and according to Mrs. Steele, usually go out with fewer errors on the tape than her keypunchers found on the written source material the clients sent in.

She also says that her keypunchers do not foresake speed in order to achieve this accuracy; the girls average 12,000 keystrokes per hour, which is well above average. Her best girls can punch 19,000 characters an hour on some material — punching better than 5 keys per second.

With the overtime of recent weeks, these girls have been making $165 a week or more, and some can earn a bonus of up to $250 for the peak season. Persons who can accurately type 45 to 50 words per minute are considered good prospects for keypunching.

Mrs. Marie Steele, President

Sheriff speaker at OCSEA meet

Sheriff Don Thompson spoke on drugs and law enforcement at a meeting of the Fayette County Chapter, Ohio Civil Service Employes Association, held Thursday evening at the Landmark Feed plant.

Seventeen members attended the session which opened with the Pledge of Allegiance led by Cliff Grove.

Jim Applegate, OCSEA state executive board member, discussed pending legislation affecting public employes which is currently before the Ohio General Assembly. Frank Ebner, OCSEA staff representative, also attended.

The local chapter designated Margaret Johnson and Gary Johnson to attend the third annual OCSEA President's Conference, to be held June 2-3 at the Imperial House North, Columbus.

Arrangements for the special speaker were in charge of the program committee, consisting of Mary Belle Burris, chairwoman; Alice Hinton, and Margaret Johnson. Refreshments were provided by Michael Kelley and Mary Belle Burris.

The next regular meeting will be held May 24 at the Landmark plant.

Car, truck collide at North-Court St.

Police cited George R. Landrum, 54, of Latham, for failure to yield right of way after a car-truck collision at the intersection of Court and North streets just before 10 a.m. Friday.

Officers said Landrum was eastbound on Court and made a left turn into the path of a westbound truck driven by Carson Curry Jr., 27, Asheville. The two vehicles collided in the intersection.

Landrum's wife, Gladys, complainted of injuries but was not treated at the time. Damage was moderate.

Pentagon papers trial judge blasts prosecution

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jurors return from a day's recess in the Pentagon papers trial today with a request pending to reopen the defense because the government withheld evidence from the court and the defendants.

U.S. Dist. Court Judge Matt Byrne admonished prosecutors angrily on Thursday and sent the jurors home after the government admitted that it had failed to make available to the defense pre-trial interviews with witnesses who have testified at the trial. The judge had ordered this done months ago.

The defense was supposed to be given the material before cross-examining the witnesses—four employes of the Rand Corp., where defendants Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo worked at the time they copied the secret Pentagon study of U.S. involvement in the Vietnam war.

The judge said a summary of one set of statements showed they would be helpful to Ellsberg's and Russo's defense against charges of espionage, conspiracy and theft.

In a separate development while the jury was absent on Thursday, the government asked Byrne to review another set of documents out of the presence of the defense lawyers. The judge refused to accept the material.

"... I cannot receive this information on an in camera basis because I have no authority to do so," said Byrne. But neither the judge nor the government gave a hint of what the documents concerned, except that they did not relate to any previous orders of the court. This ruled out the chance that it was a report on wiretapping.

Byrne said that if the government planned to give the new material to the defense "they should do so promptly."

Solons eye skin flicks

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Some Texas lawmakers have asked for a private showing of "Deep Throat" and "Last Tango in Paris" so they can see, uh, just how bad they are.

The House Intergovernmental Affairs Committee voted 12 to 1 Thursday night to subpoena the films.

Rep. Billy Williamson, D-Tyler, said the committee should see them and then vote for his bill to allow cities to license theater operators. Licenses could be revoked if X-rated films were shown to persons under 18.

"I'm here to challenge this committee to subpoena some of the current filth that is circulating in our land, that would subvert the morals of our youth," William said.

He said a newsman told him "Deep Throat" was such a film, "and something called 'Tango.'"

Bottomless bars face crackdown

INKSTER, Mich. (AP) — Police have made their first move to crack down on the bottomless go-go bars which Mayor Edward Bivins Jr. says are giving Inkster a reputation as "Sin City."

Three bars in this Detroit suburb have been offering bottomless go-go dancing for about a month, but it wasn't until Thursday that warrants were issued against 12 of the performers.

The women were charged with disorderly conduct under a section of the city's ordinance dealing with persons who "engage in indecent, immoral or obscene conduct in any public or private place."

Waste reported in NATO setup

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The United States and its allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization are wasting more than a billion dollars a year by competing with each other in arms manufactures and by not unifying their armed forces, one member of the alliance says.

Officials at NATO headquarters who reported it refused to say which one of the 15 members made the estimate.

They said a prime example of waste is the competition in anti-tank weapons. The United States, Britain and France are all trying to sell similar models to the other nations.

Deny tax increase considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying a high-ranking administration official was misunderstood when speaking of a possible tax hike, Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz has denied that President Nixon is considering an increase.

Shultz commented on an interview earlier in the week by Chairman Herbert F. Stein of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, who said "we are studying the possibility" of tax increases to slow down the economy.

Interviewed on the National Public Affairs Center for Television Thursday, Shultz said Stein's comments "were misunderstood."

"We are going to propose a program on Monday on behalf of the President ... that will aim at greater equity in the tax system and greater simplicity for the taxpayer in trying to understand that system and fill out his or her tax form," Shultz said, adding:

"But that's a very different thing from any ... proposal for an increase in taxes. There will be no such proposal."

He declined to go into more detail on the upcoming proposals. Meanwhile, Sen. William Proxmire today said if Nixon proposes a tax increase, "I will do my best to kill it."

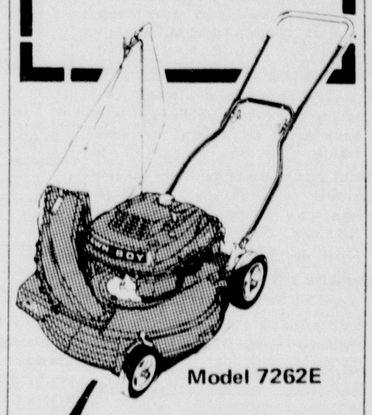

The Wisconsin Democrat, vice chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, noted some administration suggestions such an increase might be in the works as an anti-inflation move.

"It would be a harsh and outrageous act at a time when the administration is wasting billions in unneeded subsidies, excessive military aid spending, foreign military aid to some 46 countries in the world, and for frivolous items like servants for the military brass and limousines for every minor bureaucrat in Washington."

Also Thursday, AFL-CIO President George Meany urged Congress to reject President Nixon's proposal for expanding trade with the Soviet Union by granting the Soviets a most-favored trade status.

"There is no reason to believe that such treatment will lead the U.S.S.R. to make earnest efforts for removing the causes of international tension and promoting equitable and lasting world peace," Meany said in a prepared New York speech at the Congressional Medal of Honor Society's annual Patriot's Award Dinner.

When those hogs have been farrowed, fattened, and marketed, the only measure of success is PROFIT!

All the pennies saved in reduced feed and labor costs by skilled producers can vanish if the same high level of management is not present at marketing time.

The skilled producer puts an efficient marketing organization to work for him—Heinold Hog Markets.

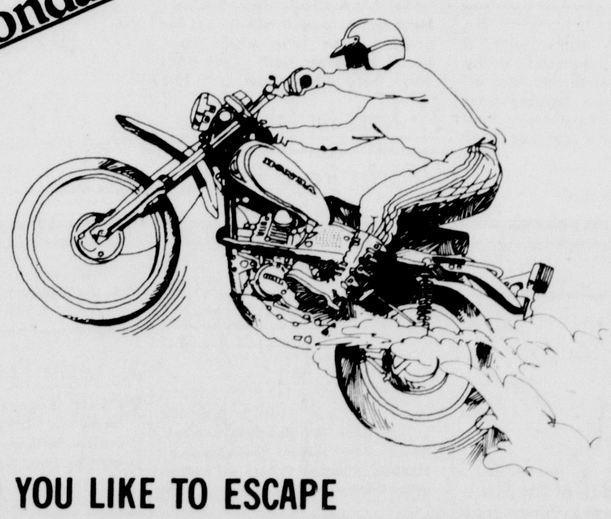

Heinold labors just as hard at marketing as the skilled hog producer does at production. As the world's largest hog marketing organization it has the efficiency, skill, and marketing power to give a producer every penny possible for his hogs.

That's why successful hog production programs end at a Heinold chute.

Contract Bridge ♠♥♦♣ B. Jay Becker

Test Your Dummy Play

1. You are declarer with the West hand at Four Hearts and North leads the king of clubs. How would you play the hand?

	♠ A763 ♥ AJ98 ♦ 872 ♣ AJ
♠ KJ2 ♥ KQ10753 ♦ K64 ♣ 8	N W E S

2. You are declarer with the West hand at Three Notrump. North leads the six of spades on which South plays the jack. How would you play the hand?

	♠ 842 ♥ KJ ♦ AK963 ♣ A94
♠ KQ7 ♥ A94 ♦ J105 ♣ K1083	N W E S

1. Win the club with the ace, draw trumps, and exit with the jack of clubs, discarding a diamond or a spade on it. North wins with the queen and must hand you the game-going trick whether he leads a spade to your K-J, a diamond to your king, or a club which gives you a ruff and discard.

2. Assuming that North has the spade length, which is certainly reasonable, you can assure the contract 100 per cent by refusing to win the first spade. South cannot injure you by switching to another suit, so let's say he returns a spade.

If North started with four spades, he can do no better than let you win with the queen, in which case you would finesse the jack of diamonds and make three notrump even though the finesse lost and South returned a spade.

If North started with five spades, you are on equally firm ground, and, in fact, you have a good chance to make more than nine tricks. The same is true if North started with six spades.

Whatever form of spade length North has, the duck at trick one destroys him as an effective fighting force. The only way you can miss is if North has five spades to the ace and you allow him to make four of them. By ducking you erase that possibility. Thereafter you can happily allow south to come in with the queen of diamonds, since no real harm can befall you.

Speaking of Your Health...

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Her Pupil Is Hyperkinetic

I am a teacher. An 8-year-old boy in my class is so active that I can truly say he never sits still for a moment.

He is very bright, but his behavior is totally disruptive.

His parents resent the fact that I have suggested medical attention for their boy.

Can anything be done for such an overactive child?

Dear Miss L.:

The dedication and training of teachers often makes them recognize behavior problems that may be overlooked, and even ignored, by parents.

Far too often, parents take it as a personal insult if they are told about unacceptable behavior of their children.

Actually, the teacher is in the best position to see a child who is in contact with other children of his own age in community living.

The kind of extraordinary hyperactivity that you describe is a very special and definite pattern of behavior which may be the result of physical or emotional problems, or a combination of both.

The condition is called "hyperkinesia."

It is strange, and oddly unexplained, that such overactivity occurs ten times more often in boys than it does in girls. It is rarely seen in children below the age of 4.

I refer, of course, to overactivity associated with abnormal emotional instability and irritability. This does not apply to the normally energetic, enthusiastic outgoing behavior of an active young child.

The parents of this boy would do well to understand the validity of your observations. Medical opinions will rule out any physical disease. Psychological studies may locate emotional conflicts.

There are now many excellent drugs which can reduce the overactivity of children, making them better students. More especially, will they be able to function better in social situations.

Why are nose drops prescribed if they cause so much trouble? I actually became addicted to one and could not spend four hours without putting drops in my nose.

Mr. F. E., Ore.

Dear Mr. E.:

The condition you describe is known as the "rebound phenomenon."

Many people who are allergic or who have a highly sensitive mucous membrane lining of the nose will become dependent (rather than "addicted") to nose drops. These people find that more and more drops are needed at more frequent intervals, to open the nasal passages. This cycle must be broken because of the damage that can be done to the lining of the nose.

Cortisone, in carefully prescribed small doses, for a short time, has been effectively used to break the cycle of dependence.

For various medical reasons, not all people are allowed to use cortisone. Under no circumstances should it be taken without a doctor's advice.

Nose drops are effective and are prescribed for short periods of time. Never are they intended to be used indiscriminately or indefinitely, nor in amounts other than prescribed.

Shaul continues housecleaning

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)— Commerce Director Dennis Shaul, buoyed by a vote of confidence from Gov. John Gilligan, Thursday forced the resignation of one aide, fired another and transferred a third.

Shaul said all were involved in questionable conduct concerning the issuing of real estate brokers' and salesmen's licenses. The real estate operation comes under Shaul's jurisdiction.

Shaul said he forced the resignation of J. David Maffeo, assistant secretary to the three-member Real Estate Commission. Maffeo, Shaul said, would have been fired if he had insisted on staying.

Maffeo earlier told Shaul and newsmen that he gave "special" exams to his wife, Betty, and his father, Joseph. He said he was in the next room when they took the written exams.

The private examinations have been abused, Shaul said, under previous administrations. He said they were primarily aimed at the handicapped and blind, but in reality were being given to "almost anybody who came in and said he could not make the regularly-scheduled examination."

Shaul said he had fired Christian Redkey, chief of the investigative section of the Real Estate Division, which is charged with administering the examinations.

He also announced the transfer of Joseph Coyner, chief of testing, but said he had not yet decided where he would be transferred to.

Another Shaul aide, Alexander Martin Jr., counsel to the commission's executive secretary, was transferred from the Real Estate Division to the enforcement section of the Securities Division. It was described as a "lateral transfer."

Shaul, in an afternoon news conference, announced the promotion of Joseph Forch and Veronica Dever to fill the gap created by the resignation, firing and transfer.

Forch will become assistant secretary to the commission and take over the duties of chief of investigation. Miss Dever will become superintendent of enforcement. She had previously been an assistant superintendent.

Shaul said the probe into the procedures surrounding licensing of politically influential persons crossed party lines. He noted that Maffeo, Redkey and former commission secretary Vernon B. McMillen were all Democrats.

McMillen was fired by Shaul several days ago when it became public knowledge that former Gov. James Rhodes received a broker's license four days before leaving office during a 45 minute "oral examination" given to him in the governor's office.

Customarily, McMillen told Shaul in a public hearing, the written broker's exam lasts as long as six hours. He said the test for a salesman's license can last up to three hours and 30 minutes. All regularly-scheduled tests are given in the presence of monitors.

Shaul earlier in the day opened his files of the 164 people who took special examinations since the Gilligan administration went into office.

Among the folders Shaul put on a conference room desk was that of Gerald Wedren, his immediate predecessor in the post. The file showed that Wedren, also a Gilligan appointee, took a broker's exam last November, passing it by a seven-point margin.

Shaul said an investigative commission, which Gilligan said Wednesday he would appoint, would look into the circumstances surrounding Wedren's testing as well as that of Rhodes, some of his key aides, and others that may have taken special tests before or after Gilligan took office.

Shaul, who has been director of commerce for 13 months, said he will declare "null and void" any license held or obtained by a department employe in a special examination since the current administration took office. He said he would order licenses obtained through normal procedures by department employes to be held in escrow until they leave state service.

Shaul, former Akron city councilman, said he had asked Gilligan to have all department heads within state government to report on any state employe who may hold either a salesman's or broker's license.

He said he wanted to know what reason there was for them having such licenses. He said it would be bad for the administration from an image standpoint to have been granting licenses to state employes, specifically those within the Department of Commerce which regulates, among other things, the Real Estate Division.

Students hold U.N. session; find new roles challenging

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — "This is probably the best experience in role-playing I'll ever have. After all, I'm a card-carrying Zionist," said 19-year-old Paula Tobenfeld.

Paula is a freshman at Kent State University who ardently supports the cause of Israel. This week, she's a Soviet delegate attacking Israel at an all-student simulated session of the United Nations.

"For my speech in the Security Council, it was suggested I compare Zionism to Nazism, but I wouldn't go that far," said Paula, who belongs to Masada, a Zionist youth movement.

Paula, who would like to be a diplomat, said: "The most important thing a country or a person can do is to understand what the other fellow is thinking. I don't agree with many policies of the Soviet Union, but this way I can understand why they are doing what they do. I think that is what the U.N. is all about.

More than 1,000 young Americans from 130 colleges and universities have gathered in New York to stage mock debates at the annual National Model United Nations. They meet with U.N. diplomats and officials at foreign missions or U.N. headquarters and hold their simulated sessions at a midtown Manhattan hotel.

Policies of countries are followed faithfully, but "poetic license" and more direct language is permitted than heard at the real United Nations, Security Council President Robert Burstein, 21, of the New York Law College, said.

Tom Chelton, 21, of Indiana State College, Terre Haute, heads tha U.S. General Assembly delegation. He said the U.S. role is one of the most challenging of all.

Man loses bid for $150,000 found as GI

WASHINGTON (AP)—Donald W. Morrison may have found $150,000 while on a patrol in Vietnam in 1968, says a federal claims commissioner, but he isn't entitled to keep it because he was acting as "an agent of the United States."

Commissioner Kenneth R. Harkins recommended Thursday that the U.S. Court of Claims turn down the former soldier's petition to regain the money, his third setback in efforts to lay hands on the cash he found in the mountains of South Vietnam.

Earlier, both the Defense Department and a federal district court judge in Morrison's native Georgia turned down his request for the money.

Morrison contends the money is his because it constitutes a "treasure trove."

When Morrison discovered the money, Harkins said, "he did so as an agent of the United States" and is not a "finder" of the $150,000.
